'Misanthrope' Wears Costumes From 1600's

Costuming a 20th century college cast for a 17th century court scene involves problems, according to Al Kohout, head of costuming for the University Theater's production of Moliere's "Misanthrope," beginning Oct. 20 at Howell Theater.

Kohout said that research for period costuming is very time consuming. For "Misanthrope," research began last summer with particular attention to paintings and sculpture of the 17th century to insure accurate designing.

Basic research completed, it was necessary to adapt the period costumes to the individual style of this specific play. Kohout and Director Joseph Baldwin also had to consider individual cast members.

The final decision was that women's costumes would follow the styles of the 1680's which included corseting, high bosoms and puffed sleeves.

Men's costumes will be reproduced from a later period, 1700, and will feature the long full-skirted coats and three-piece suits that were the height of fashion in French society.

The eleven costumes for the cast are being made from satin and brocade in deep pink, yellow, blue and green. Kohout said that it has been necessary to take artistic license in this area, for the high cost of the rich materials used in the 1700's would be impossible to finance.

The costume work is being done entirely by student volunteers. According to Kohout the schedule is running relatively well, but more workers are needed. Students interested are urged to contact Kohout at Temple Theater.

"Misanthrope," a comedy heightened to tragedy, is the story of a man condemned to loneliness because he cannot compromise within himself in order to exist in society.

John Jessup, veteran of University Theater will portray Alceste. The female lead, Celime, a mischievous court lady will be played by Sue Vosik. Oronto, in love with fickle Celime, is Bruce Borin's role.

Dana Mills, graduate student, will play the part of Philinte, friend of Alceste. Mary Meckel, new to Howell Theater, will portray Arsinae.

The play will be presented Oct. 20-21, Nov. 10-11, Dec. 1-2 and Dec. 15-16, alternating with "A Delicate Balance," by Edward Albee.

Student Tribunal Presents Opportunities For Students

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article on the Student Tribunal is the second in a series on the current court structures at the University. The series has been created to inform the students of their legal rights and of the jurisdictions and activities of the various courts.

By ED ICENOGLIE
Senior Staff Writer

Student Tribunal is a court of a different color. It has neither prosecution nor defense, but informal discussion. And it issues recommendations, not orders.

"When the administration has a grievance against a student," explained Brent Worms, members of the Student Tribunal, "the student has the opportunity to go before the tribunal."

RECOMMENDATION
The Tribunal makes a recommendation on any disciplinary or corrective action it feels necessary and informs the student and the administration of the recommendation.

"The administration does not have to follow the recommendation," Worms added. "But it almost always does."

Although students can request a meeting with Student Tribunal for any action taken by the administration on infractions, Worms said, most cases deal with only the more severe actions.

DISCUSSION
"Actually we're not like a court," he said. "It is really more of a discussion period."

The Tribunal is composed of six students and two faculty members, according to G. Robert Ross, dean of student affairs.

"We (the administration) refer cases to the court," Ross said, "and they make recommendations."

Meeting at least once a week, the Tribunal is chaired by Lynn Overholt and has four seniors and two juniors.

INTERVIEWS
Tribunal members are selected through interviews by outgoing Tribunal members and the two juniors must reapply to be considered for a second term. The Student Senate approves the candidates nominated through the interviews.

Tribunal members cannot hold positions on the Student Court or the Senate.

"Students can appeal recommendations and decisions," Worms indicated.

APPEALS
The appeal is to be Recommendation Board of the Faculty Senate, and ultimately to the Board of Regents.

"There is no appeal between the Student Court and the Tribunal," said Terry Schaaf, associate justice of the Student Court. "There might be a possibility for appeals but it has never been done."

Schaaf also said that the Court would probably refuse to consider such an appeal as being out of the Court's jurisdiction.

The Court is designed for cases concerning organization, Worms also said, while the Tribunal is reserved for disciplinary actions on students.

Toastmasters Meet On East Campus

The East Campus Toastmasters Club is being re-organized for its second year, according to Terry Cacek, chairman of the Ag Advisory Board.

"The Ag Advisory Board is encouraging all students to consider this opportunity to develop their public speaking ability," Cacek explained.

"We feel that Toastmasters offers an atmosphere for learning which cannot be equalled elsewhere," he added.

Cacek cited voluntary participation as the motivating force for a more open minded atmosphere and more rapid progress than in the classroom.

"Many students feel that Toastmastering supplements their speech courses and even exceeds them in practical application," Cacek said.

East Campus Toastmasters is the only know Toastmasters organization which is open to women as well as men, Cacek noted.

The meetings are held on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the C. Y. Thompson Library, Cacek said, and interested students are invited to attend several meetings as guests.

Fellowships Awarded By Nat'l. Science Foundation

The National Science Foundation plans to award about 2300 graduate fellowships and 130 post-doctoral fellowships for the 1968-1969 academic year.

Deadline for the receipt of applications for graduate fellowships is Dec. 8, 1967, and for regular post-doctoral fellowships, Dec. 11, 1967.

The purpose of these fellowships is to promote the progress of science in the U.S., according to the National Research Council.

FELLOWSHIPS

Fellowships will be awarded for study in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, and social sciences, including the history and philosophy of science.

Applications may be made by college seniors, graduate students working toward a degree, post-doctoral students and others with equivalent training and experience.

Applicants are required to take Graduate Record Examinations designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement. The examinations, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on Jan. 20, 1968, at designated centers in the U.S.

ABILITY
Each applicant will be evaluated on the basis of ability by panels of outstanding scientists. Awards will be announced on March 15, 1968.

Annual stipends for graduate fellows are as follows: $2400 for the first year level; $2600 for the intermediate level; and $2800 for the terminal level. The basic annual stipend for post-doctoral fellows is $6500.

Dependency allowances and allowances for tuition, fees, and limited travel will also be provided.

ANY INSTITUTION
NSF Graduate Fellowships may be used at any non-profit United States or non-profit foreign institution of higher education, providing that he has been accepted in a graduate degree program in science.

The Foundation does not necessarily require that a recipient be physically located at his institution at all times, thus allowing for outside research or teaching.

Scholarly development of the Fellow, not service to the institution, will govern the assignment of these activities.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington D.C.
