State Drug Investigation Closing

Senator Urges Use Of 'Spies'

By ED ICENOGLE
Senior Staff Writer

Undercover agents should be used for investigating drug abuse on the University campus, state Senator Terry Carpenter said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Carpenter said that regardless of student reaction to the so-called "student spies," the agents are needed to uncover use of drugs.

"I could care less what the reaction is to this," he said. "There is already too much reaction and not enough action."

"I don't give a damn about what the students think about this," he added.

Carpenter cited statistics released nationally that indicated a growing problem with drugs.

"Recently the Gallup Poll and Reader's Digest took a poll of all universities in this country," he said. "They discovered that one per cent are using LSD and six per cent are using marijuana."

Although this percentage in itself is not large, the Unicameral legislator from Scottsbluff said, the figures, when applied to the University, would indicate that 180 students are using LSD and 1,000 are using marijuana.

"I don't know that there is this much of it," he said, "but you obviously cannot get those who are violating the law with men in uniforms."

He was in favor of the State Highway Patrol continuing investigations on the campus, using students as spies if necessary.

"I am going to see that more is done," he said, to eliminate the use of the drugs.

The representative felt that the problem of drugs is not confined to the University, and that it is present throughout the state.

"We've even got a lot of it out here in Scottsbluff," he said.

Carpenter believed that quantities of marijuana are now being sent through the mails.

Planning to visit Lincoln, Monday, Carpenter said he would like to talk with University students concerned with the use of the student agents.

"I am willing to defend my stand on this," he said.

Undercover agents are not currently operating on the University campus, G. Robert Ross, dean of student affairs, said last week.

No Charges Foreseen In Marijuana Inquiry

By ED ICENOGLE
Senior Staff Writer

Police investigation of an alleged case of marijuana use on the University campus is near completion with no charges foreseen by the county attorney's office.

"As of now the investigation has failed to produce enough evidence for the filing of any complaint," William Blue, assistant county attorney, said Tuesday.

An inquiry into the incident of drug possession and use in a University residence hall has been headed by the Drug Control Division of the State Patrol.

Following admitted usage of marijuana, the student withdrew from the University two weeks ago.

EVIDENCE TURNED OVER

Information and evidence obtained by the office of the dean of student affairs in connection with the case were turned over to the authorities after the student withdrew.

"I think the investigation is probably completed," Blue said.

Although the evidence thus far collected by the state has not been sufficient to file charges, the student's admission to the use of marijuana on the campus was grounds for his forced withdrawal, according to G. Robert Ross, dean of student affairs.

"Our experience with this student is not an isolated thing," he said of the admission of guilt. "We have found the easiest, most honest way to find answers is to simply ask the students."

WARNING

Ross indicated the student had been warned that any admission would be considered in disciplinary action to be taken against him.

In this respect, he said, there was "some pressure on him (the student) to withdraw."

Ross added the student had been given sufficient opportunity to acquire legal advice before his decision to either withdraw or face University disciplinary action.

The student had been contacted about the University's evidence eight days before he withdrew, Ross said.

ADVICE

"He was advised to discuss this with his parents," Ross said, "and his parents were advised to get legal advice for him."

The evidence collected by the University and later turned over to authorities was termed "irrelevant" by Ross, who declined to disclose the evidence.

The evidence was made irrelevant, he said, by the student's admission to the dean and two other witnesses.

"I can't predict what the Student Tribunal would have said if the student had not withdrawn," Ross said. He indicated that the office of student affairs would probably have taken action regardless of the Tribunal's recommendation.

SERVICE

Ross said during the last week before the student withdrew, the University had attempted to "be of service to him" through counseling.

"Our interests are in helping him," he said. "Additional staff people spent time talking with him."

"And we are trying to be of continued service to him although he is not still in the University."

Senate To Discuss Dorm Open House

Student Senate will discuss the dormitory open house question and the presence of business and military recruiters on the University campus at Wednesday's meeting, according to Vice President Gene Pokorny.

The meeting will probably go into a "committee-of-the-whole" to discuss these topics. Pokorny said he knows of no definite resolutions which will be introduced on either of the issues.

He indicated Senators may introduce resolutions at the conclusion of the discussions.

Senators will also select a new Teachers' College senator to fill the seat vacated by Kris Bitner's resignation.

Pokorny said several ASUN committees will make reports to the body. The Ad Hoc Committee on Vietnam will present a final report on the Vietnam Week activities.

Author Lane To Speak On JFK's Assassination

Mark Lane, author of Rush to Judgment, best-seller concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, will speak to University students Nov. 16 at 3:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union Ballroom.

Lane began an extensive investigation of the late President's death when he formed the Citizens Committee of Inquiry shortly after the assassination. Since that time he has traveled to Dallas five times and appeared before the Warren Commission twice.

The New York lawyer has also been in contact with James Garrison, New Orleans District Attorney who has in-

NIA, PTP Sponsor Tea, Panel, Buffet

In conjunction with International Week, a tea will be held Wednesday in the Nebraska Union from 2 to 5 p.m.

The purpose of the tea is to provide a casual atmosphere where foreign and American students may meet, according to Pam Cot, president of People to People.

A panel discussion on the "Success and Failure of American Foreign Policy" will be held Thursday evening at 7 p.m. in the Union. The panel will be composed of several foreign students and two American students.

International Week, which is sponsored by People to People and Nebraska International Association (NIA), will conclude Sunday, Nov. 19, with a soccer game and international food buffet.

The soccer game will pit the Nebraska soccer team, composed primarily of foreign students, against the Omaha Kickers at 2 p.m.

The international food buffet, an annual event, will be held at the First Christian Church at 16th and K Streets from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. There will be thirty dishes offered and all food will be prepared by the members of NIA.

The dinner will cost $1.50 per person and tickets may be purchased at the Union. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Miss Cot, said that the buffet provides the organization with its sole source of revenue and this year's profits will be used to finance a scholarship for a foreign student.

Baez Scheduled To Sing Tonight

Folk singer Joan Baez will present a two hour concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Pershing Auditorium. The folk singer has released several best-selling albums and is considered by many critics to be the most important woman in the field of folk music today.

AWS Convention . . . Constitutional Delegates Begin General Sessions

By SHERRY MCGAFFIN
Junior Staff Writer

Delegates to the AWS Constitutional Convention will meet Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in the basement of Raymond Hall for the first of five general sessions, according to Nancy Coufal, Convention chairman.

The general meetings will be open to all students and individual opinions concerning the issues will be heard, Miss Coufal said. Delegates will have the only voting power.

Tuesday Miss Coufal presented AWS board members with several issues that will be considered Thursday. She indicated that changes in the judicial area will be discussed.

SECTION ONE

Section one of the proposed constitution states that the AWS Judicial system shall consist of a central court of appeals and regional branch courts. The branch courts will act upon violations of AWS regulations involving women under that specific court's jurisdiction.

A clause in Article one concerns the restrictions placed on referring cases to the courts. Miss Coufal said that article one states that cases may be referred through appeals from students or dorm personnel.

She said that this is somewhat of an escape clause because it permits any coed in a living unit to turn in a case.

A decision will have to be made concerning the power of the court of appeals, Miss Coufal said. Some distinction will be made as to whether this court will rule on procedural rights or the actual substance of the case, she added.

Last week in an individual committee meeting, delegates voted to limit the members of Congress to 35, according to Miss Coufal. Cabinet positions have also been reduced to nine.

Miss Coufal said that these changes were made because the legislative committee felt that a smaller number would permit better communication within the system.

Ann Windle, AWS president, said the proposed court system is basically what the AWS Board wanted. All of the branch courts would function like the Sandoz court, the dormitory pilot court which started last month.

'GOOD JOB'

Commenting on the convention, Steph Tinan, program vice-president, said that the delegates have done a good job in the revision of the AWS system. They seem to completely forget, however, the present structure, she added.

She said that AWS has accomplished much with the present structure but that the delegates have given it no recognition in the new proposed revisions.

Ann Windle, AWS president said that the board members have remained out of the procedures and they probably will have very little to say until the structure and the finer points are considered.

Over 300 Register For Blood Donation

A maximum number of donors have registered for the University of Nebraska Red Cross Bloodmobile this Thursday, according to Walt Baumann, chairman of the recruitment and scheduling committee.

Baumann said between 300 and 350 students have signed to give blood. Those scheduled for appointments will be notified by mail Wednesday.

REPLACEMENT

Blood donated will be used to replace blood losses due to injury, childbirth or disease; to treat shock due to injury; for those undergoing surgery; for those burned or anemic; and to make blood components to serve many new medical purposes.

Under the reciprocity agreement between the Red Cross and the American Association of Blood Banks, a donor may make a direct donation for a patient anywhere in the United States.

Any individual donating a unit of blood at the University of Nebraska Bloodmobile will establish eligibility for his or her blood needs, anywhere in the United States for a period of one year from the date of donation. Immediate family needs will be met as blood is available on an individual request basis.

PARENTAL PERMISSION

Baumann stressed the importance of the parental permission card for those under 21 donating blood.

The entire process of donating blood takes 40-60 minutes. Most of this time is utilized by taking the temperature and getting the medical history of each donor. Actually donating one pint of blood takes less than 10 minutes.

All donors receive a card from the Bloodmobile laboratory noting their blood type sometime after the Bloodmobile.

Gamma Phi-DU Won The Trophy

The Daily Nebraskan regrets that a headline in the Nov. 13 issue incorrectly stated that the first place Homecoming display was awarded to Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

The Gamma Phi Beta-Delta Upsilon display won first place in the competition. Delta Delta Delta and Alpha Tau Omega also received a plaque for their display, "Cowboys looped by Corn Spirits."
