

—Informed source says— 'NU's housing policy remains unchanged

by John Dvorak
Junior Staff Writer

Next year's housing policy has already been formulated and will not be greatly changed from this year's policy, an informed source told the Daily Nebraskan Wednesday.

The policy will be released shortly, according to Edward Bryan, director of housing. He would not comment on its content, however.

Currently, single undergraduate women and freshman and sophomore men must live on campus or with parents or relatives.

Appeal to board

Students who want to live off-campus must appeal to the Housing Appeals Board, a four-member group composed of housing officers.

"We work with the criteria approved by the University Housing Policy Committee," said Bryan, a member of the board.

"The housing office reviews all the information accompanying the student's application, and if that is insufficient, we request further justification," said Bryan.

Variety of reasons

"There are a wide variety of reasons, such as financial, health, and psychological, for granting an off-campus living permit," Bryan explained.

Financial need is the single strongest reason for an off-campus permit, he said. Students must submit a financial statement, and the board, using all the information at hand, makes a ruling.

In some cases, the board must judge how a living unit affects the individual psychologically, Bryan said.

Permission to commute

Students are allowed to commute from their homes to the University, Bryan said. "If the distance is great, we do try to discourage the applicant though," he added. One student is commuting 75 miles, he said.

On occasion, students claim to be commuting and are really living in off-campus housing, Bryan added.

"The housing office can do nothing until it has information that a student is in some way violating the housing rules," he said.

"We must assume a student's statements are true until proven otherwise," Bryan said. "We feel he has wronged himself more than the University."

500 requests yearly

The Housing Appeals Board

considers about 500 off-campus living permit requests yearly. Everyone who finds a need to live off campus goes through this process, Bryan said. He estimated that about two in ten requests are denied.

If students are not satisfied with the judgment of the Housing Appeals Board, they may transfer their appeal to the University Housing Policy Committee, an eight-member group appointed by the Chancellor.

All information is forwarded to this group. Only two or three cases have been appealed to the board this year, according to a student member, Richard Page.

The committee makes recommendations, but has never reversed a decision of the Housing Appeals Board, said to Page.

If a student is not satisfied with the decision of the committee, he could ultimately appeal his case to the Office of Student Affairs, according to Bryan.

When housing officials learn that a student is violating the housing policy, the student is called before the board.

There are no set penalties for such violators, Bryan said.

Board of Regents to discuss alternatives to open housing

The University Board of Regents will informally discuss alternatives to the present open housing policy with the subcommittee on student affairs Friday, according to G. Robert Ross, vice chancellor and dean of student affairs.

No immediate action by the Regents is expected as a result of the discussion, said Ross.

After meeting with the Regents, the subcommittee will hold another conference before convening with the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs, Ross said.

The Regents have held no discussion on the matter since an informal meeting with Bruce Bailey, Inter-Dormitory Association (IDA) president, Feb. 23, Lincoln Regent Edward Schwartzkopf said Wednesday.

"We're going to sit down and work this matter out," he added.

Bailey and Mike Eyster, IDA vice president, met with the subcommittee last Friday to discuss the open housing proposals that the subcommittee is considering.

Although the subcommittee will not state the nature of the proposals it will discuss Friday, Helen Snyder, chairman of the subcommittee, said earlier the proposals would include IDA ideas and suggestions from other sources.

Cather Hall elects executive officers

Ken Noha, a sophomore bio-chemistry-economics major from Wahoo, was elected Cather Hall President Tuesday in the dormitory's annual elections.

Selected as vice president was Harry Tilley, a junior history major from Omaha, while Bob Yunag was elected secretary, Allen Bestmann was picked as treasurer and Steve Minnick was elected social chairman.

Jerry Lockwood was elected Inter-Dormitory Association (IDA) representative, Barry Pilger was selected activities chairman and the residence hall's new constitution was ratified by a wide margin.

A member of the Cather Hall Executive Council, Noha said the remainder of the current academic year's work would be devoted to a few selected programs. This will enable the new administration to gain temporary experience before undertaking plans for next fall's programs.

While organizing the new officers, Noha said he would delegate responsibility to all officers in establishing the governing body's internal organization.

He said experimental programs will be held this semester primarily in the social areas, but he declined to elaborate further.

World Report

Dr. Christian Barnard has announced that the World's only living heart transplant patient, Dr. Phillip Blalberg, will be released from the Cape Town hospital next week.

Barnard, with plans for another operation in the works, said that it is conceivable that Blalberg may some day need a new heart to replace the one which is currently giving him a new lease on life.

Barnard has defeated arguments that he was premature in doing heart transplants. He received a generous round of applause from a medical gathering which he was addressing at Cornell, when he detailed reports of his operations.

The Federal Aviation Agency has requested that Eastern Airlines fire Jimmy Lane, a Fort Lauderdale pilot who has worked with the firm for eleven years and has a clean slate. The problem, Lane only has a private pilot's license, and that isn't good enough.

The FAA said it will investigate in hopes of finding other imposters in the business.

Patrick Nugent, son-in-law of President Johnson has rejoined his old Air Force Reserve unit and is hoping to be sent to Vietnam.

Marine Captain Charles Robb, the other son-in-law, will be sent to Vietnam March 29.

Major General Jan Sejna, top Czech Army official has defected to the United States and is seeking political asylum. He was thought to be in the wrong side of a power struggle at the time he left his country.

Paul Roche, a young English poet and novelist, will lecture on "Five Ways of Shattering Poetry" Thursday afternoon, according to Carol Madson, chairman of Union Talks and Topics Committee.

Roche will discuss examples of how the response to poetry

He has written such works as The Orestes Plays of Aeschylus, and The Rank Obscurity of Things. His poems and short stories have appeared in international magazines including the New Yorker to Encounter.

Roche won the Alice Fay de Castagnola Award. His talks and readings have been broadcast over radio and television and he has spoken on campuses across the country.

Miss Madson, whose committee is sponsoring the event, said the talk will be delivered in the small auditorium of the Union at 3:30 p.m.

Soviet topic at Union tonight

The talk was originally scheduled for 3:30 but was changed due to complications. It is co-sponsored by the Talks and Topics Committee and the Nebraska International Association.

The speech will examine recent developments in light of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the October Revolution.

Faculty Senate agenda: over OU

The Faculty Senate will meet Tuesday at 4 p.m. according to Walter Mientka, professor of mathematics and Senate secretary.

Discussion on the agenda will include a meeting with faculty members from Omaha University. He noted that the talk will cover academic areas, academic administration structure, faculty Senate structure, and students at O.U.

Mientka added that reports will be heard from the honorary degrees and publications committee also.

—Anti-war sentiment— Students to picket Dow to protest war machine

by Jim Pedersen
Junior Staff Writer

Dow Chemical Company interviews on campus Friday will be the focal point of an anti-war demonstration to be held at the Nebraska Union beginning at 9:30 a.m., a student spokesman said Wednesday.

The demonstration is spontaneous and unaffiliated with any organization, Lee Kinney, one student sponsor of the demonstration, said Wednesday.

Dow Chemical Company which produce napalm for the government was chosen as the target for the demonstration not because it is the cause of the war, but because it is a part of the war machine which is active on campus in recruiting graduates, Kinney said.

march on campus, but will limit their activity to the Union.

"Response, hopefully, will be greater in light of the recent draft curtailment of graduate students and graduating seniors," said Mick Lowe, another of the students backing the demonstration.

"Uniform in four months"

"Within four months all of these people will be in uniform, and six months later many of them will be in Vietnam," Lowe said.

University students should show the people of Nebraska that they are opposed to the war, according to Lowe.

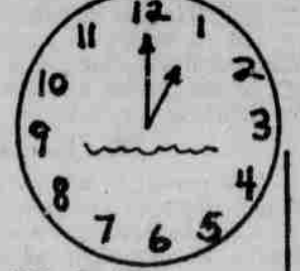

"I, personally, am tired of talking to a hundred people a week who oppose the war and are doing nothing. This will give students an opportunity to express their opinions," Lowe added.

Lowe added that he expects approximately twenty students at the demonstration.

Part of war machine

The protesting students feel that Dow should justify their position as a part of the war machine, Kinney said.

Kinney noted that there is a growing sentiment of anti-war feeling on campus encompassing a wide variety of students. He added that the demonstration will give these students an opportunity to make a definite commitment.

The small group of concerned students who will sponsor the demonstration will provide placards and pins for demonstrators.

No recruiting

The students will not actively recruit demonstrators, but will distribute mimeographed sheets giving the time and place of the demonstration, Kinney said.

The demonstration will be of a come-and-go nature with participating students leaving to attend their classes, according to Kinney. He added that it is hoped the demonstration will continue throughout the day.
