

Dr. Nevitt Sanford of Stanford University kicks off the World in Revolution conference Thursday by discussing the problems in higher education.

Sanford: rework education goals

The basis for improvement in higher education today is a reconsideration of the aims of education, Dr. Nevitt Sanford, professor of psychology at Stanford University, said Thursday in a World in Revolution speech.

Speaking to students, faculty and high school principals in the Nebraska Theatre, Sanford outlined the three aims of education as:

- the development of the individual
- the preservation and advance of culture
- the maintenance of technology.

According to Sanford the most important of the three perspectives of education is the development of the individual. Individual fulfillment leads to the fulfillment of the other two objectives, Dr. Sanford said.

Work for integration

Institutes of higher education must work for an integration of all three aims, Dr. Sanford said. He added, however, that the preservation and advance of culture and the maintenance of technology should in no way impair individual development.

The best method to evaluate the effectiveness of higher education is to examine the alumni of the institution, Dr. Sanford said. Although there are some distinguished graduates, many spend their time in an idle fashion, he said.

Dr. Sanford listed many of the criticisms that are now being leveled at higher education including too much faculty publications, impersonality of the university, and irrelevancy of the curriculum.

Blame to faculty

The faculty receives most of the blame for these criticisms but they are rewarded on no other basis than the amount of publication they do, Sanford said.

Formerly the teaching of undergraduates was of primary importance. Now publishing and the training of graduate students has become the main objective of the faculty, Dr. Sanford noted. Colleges have become interested in the undergraduate students only in the area of academic standing, according to Sanford.

Since the 1940's, colleges and universities have been intent on raising their standards, Sanford said. This has simply taken the form of giving students more work, Dr. Sanford added.

In the area of project research, graduate students have been forced to funnel their research into areas which will assure them grants, not research that they are interested in, according to Sanford.

Fragmented work

In addition to reducing the efficiency of research, this trend has separated teaching from research and caused an outpour of highly specialized and fragmented work, Sanford said.

These methods have undermined the basic values of a University as a social and educational institution, Dr. Sanford said. The university must be a community of teachers and students consisting of the values of trust, concern, justice, freedom, and above all truth, Sanford added.

A university must have trust between students and faculty, according to Sanford. "There are colleges where students do not trust the faculty, the faculty do not trust the students, and no one trusts the president," Sanford said.

Freedom is another essential element of the university. There are colleges where student freedom is restricted internally by tradition and student peer groups, and externally by the legislature, Church, and man-on-the-street, Sanford noted.

The successful pursuit of truth about oneself and society depends on the existence of all other qualities listed, according to Sanford.

Dorm leaders approve policy

The new open house policy has met with favorable initial response from several dormitory student leaders and residence hall directors contacted Thursday.

In approving the plan passed Thursday by the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs, the residence hall leaders felt the new IDA Hours would increase student responsibility.

Inter-Dormitory Association (IDA) President Bruce Bailey said the plan's strong points of eliminating the sign-in sheet and allowing residents not participating in the social event to close their doors made the proposal "very acceptable."

Open house defined

The new policy, in defining an open house, which is a formal social activity and the new IDA Hours, which "encourage educational and social exchanges on an informal level," split the functions into two separate areas, Bailey said.

"It's important that we implement this policy and follow it along these lines," said the IDA executive, who has spoken before the University Board of Regents on the issue.

The IDA Hours will eliminate the controversial open door ruling, which was passed by the subcommittee on social affairs and activities last December as one of six open house stipulations.

The open door ruling, which was retained in the open house event, states that all doors except those of residents absent from the floor during the open house must remain open and those residents leaving the floor must register their absence with the responsible officer.

Although the policy is not a drastic change from the plan in operation first semester this year, it did signify an understanding between students, faculty and administration officials, Abel-Sandoz President Richard Page explained.

"You can't say either side, if you want to use that term, gave in to anything, but it did clear up all the problems," he added.

In placing the governing responsibility of the IDA hours on the residents, Page said the plan would promote residence hall programs such as faculty fellows.

Although Bob Muschewski, Abel North residence director and Jim Pequette, Cather Hall residence director have not given the plan extensive thought, both felt the proposal would present no problems in enforcement.

"This gives the residence hall staff a chance to inject social, educational and intellectual goals into our program," Pequette said. He further explained it would give dormitory residents the opportunity to develop sound planning in encouraging the objectives of both social events.

The plan recommended to the Faculty Senate Committee by the subcommittee was called by Brian Ridenour, former IDA president the basic solution to the issue and was acceptable to all concerned parties.

In creating rather general guidelines, the committee established a plan which gave the students the goals they desired, Mike Eyster, IDA vice president said.

"I was glad to see the cooperation between the students and committee in setting up the plan placing responsibility on the students," he said.

While appearing to be a good step towards affirming student responsibility, the plan is as close an alternative to the coed visitation plan as is permissible," former IDA vice president Dave Shonka said. Shonka, who introduced the coed visitation policy which was denied by the Regents last April, said the coed visitation plan was even more liberal than the new proposal which becomes effective Monday.

He said coed visitation required no registration prior to the scheduled event and did not require supervision during its duration.

"But from the looks of it, I'd say it seems to be a workable compromise to coed visiting hours," he added.

MORNINGS AT SEVEN... AND THERE'S NOTHING YOU CAN DO ABOUT IT

Any man who says morning is the best time of day is either a liar or a meadow lark.

There is only one way to make morning enjoyable: sleep till noon. Failing that, the very best you can do is to make morning tolerable. This, I am pleased to report, is possible if you will follow three simple rules:

1. Shave properly.
By shaving properly I mean shaving quietly. Don't use a blade that whines and complains. Morning being a time of danger and anger, use a blade that neither clangs nor sings. Use a blade that makes no din on your chin, no squeak on your cheek, no howl on your jaw, no rip on your lip, no waves while it shaves. Use, in short, Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades.

I have been shaving for 71 years (not too impressive until one considers that I am 49 years old) and I am here to tell you that the quietest blade I know is Personna. I not only shave with Personna, but I also admire it. Old virtues reappear in Personna; old values are reborn. Personna is a modest blade, an undemanding blade. Personna does not rasp and tug, yelling, "Hey, lookit me!" No, sir, not Personna! Silently, respectfully, unobtrusively, Personna whisks your whiskers with nary a whisper. It shucks your soil and stubble without toil and trouble. Why, you hardly know it's there, this well-bred Personna blade, this paragon of punctilio.

Moreover, this crown of the blade-maker's art, this epitome of epidermal efficacy, is available both in Double-edge style and Injector style. Do your kisser a favor: get some.

2. Breakfast properly.
I assert that a Personna shave is the best of all possible shaves. But I do not assert that a Personna shave, bracing though it may be, is enough to prepare you for the hideous forenoon ahead. After shaving you must eat an ample breakfast.

Take, for example, the case of Basil Metabolism, a sophomore at V.M.I. Basil, knowing there was to be an inspection by the Commandant one morning, prepared by storing up energy. He recognized that coffee and juice would not sustain him, so he had a flitch of bacon, a clutch of eggs, a batch of bagels, a notch of ham, a bunch of butter, a swatch of gris, a hutch of honey, a patch of jelly, a thatch of jam, a twitch of pepper, and a pinch of salt.

The idea was right; the quantities, alas, were not. When the Commandant arrived, Basil, alas, was so torpid that he could not raise his bloused arm in a proper salute. He was, of course, immediately shot by a firing squad. Today, a perforated man, he earns a meagre living as a collander in Cleveland.

3. Read properly.
Always read the paper at breakfast. It inhibits bolting. But do not read the front page. That is full of bad, acid-making news. Read a more pleasant part of the paper—the Home and Garden section, for example.

For instance, in my local paper, The Westport Peasant, there is a delightful column called "Ask Harry Home-spin" which fairly bristles with bucolic wisdom and many an earthy chuckle. I quote some questions and answers:

Q: I am thinking of buying some power tools. What should I get first?
A: Hospitalization.
Q: How do you get rid of moles?
A: Pave the lawn.
Q: What is the best way to put a wide car in a narrow garage?
A: Butter it.
Q: What do you do for elm blight?
A: Salt water gargle and bed rest.
Q: What can I do for dry hair?
A: Get a wet hat.

Personna's partner in shaving comfort is Burma-Shave, regular or menthol. Together, Personna and Burma-Shave make a considerable contribution toward forenoon survival.

Voters must get absentee ballot forms

Twenty-one year old students attending the University away from their voting residences must request an absentee ballot in order to participate in the 1968 national elections.

The necessary supplies may be obtained from the student's county clerk or election commissioner, but will not be sent unless a written request is submitted, according to the office of Frank Marsh, Secretary of State.

Those who have not previously registered to vote will be sent two application forms along with the absentee ballot.

The deadline for registration for the May 14 primary election is May 3, 1968. The final registration date for the Nov. 5 general election is Oct. 25, 1968.

To qualify as a legal voter in Nebraska the student must be 21, have resided in the state six months, the county 40 days, and the precinct 10 days. In addition U.S. citizenship and voter registration is required.
