Novel set-up uses one control

by Connie Winkler
Junior Staff Writer

Everything is still in the library, don't worry. It has just been rearranged to make things easier for the student.

During the summer, Love Memorial Library was rearranged to provide "better and quicker service, saving time and frustration for the student," said Eugene M. Johnson, associate director of libraries for public service.

"All the same materials are available, but they have been regrouped," continued Johnson.

THE SYSTEM with Humanities, Social Science, and Science reading rooms has been abandoned. There is now a general reference room and a current periodicals room. Other books are in continuous display under two classification systems.

The reading rooms system served well when the enrollment was smaller, because each librarian and each staff member was subject-oriented. As the enrollment, staff, and number of books increased, service deteriorated.

"This new system allows us to concentrate the library staff at one point," said Johnson. Students can get help at the loan desk and the information desk near the card catalog.

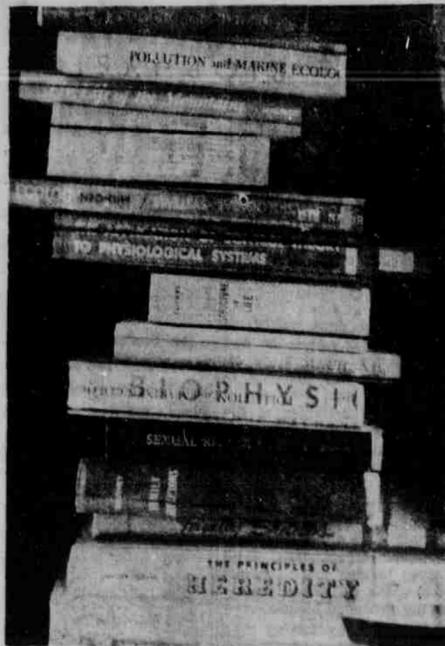

There were three rooms with reference materials. There is now one central reference room in the north room on second floor, Johnson said.

Current periodicals were in the reading rooms according to subject, he added. Now the 2,500 periodicals most frequently used by the undergraduates have been brought together in the current periodicals room on third floor.

THE COLLEGE library, consisting of books selected primarily for their undergraduate interest, is filed in two sequences.

If the book was acquired after 1964, it is classified according to the Library of Congress system. This sequence is shelved in the north room on the third floor and continues in the east room on the second floor.

Books acquired prior to 1964 are classified in the Dewey Decimal system. They are shelved in the east rooms on second and first floors.

Here's how it stacks up.

Student involvement IDA goal

"Student Involvement" will characterize the programs of this year's Inter-Dormitory Association, according to IDA president Bruce Bailey.

"Rather than working on a project of setting up better and bigger social functions, there will be more of a program to try to finally involve the students," he continued.

For the residence hall system to be effective, it must meet all of the student's needs, Bailey pointed out. Particularly, it must give the individual student an atmosphere for intellectual growth.

"THERE IS going to have to be some kind of intellectual experience for them to have so they will want to come back. This will be what we are calling 'Project Awareness,'" Bailey said.

This project will involve creating interest in areas varying from cultural events to community service projects.

In other matters, IDA is sponsoring a leadership conference for dormitory officers on October 5. This will be an opportunity for the officers to meet and discuss mutual problems as well as hear the advice of professional administrators.

THE CONFERENCE will be followed in the evening by an all-University "Computer Dance," according to Bailey.

During its meeting of September 16, IDA established the new office of public relations chairman and appointed Roxy Gee to fill the post.

Sheldon Gallery to show series of award films

Not content to be merely an exhibition hall, Sheldon Art Gallery will again this year sponsor a cultural program of films.

They are John Huston's "To Beat the Devil," Alfred Hitchcock's "The Lady Vanishes," and Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman."

THE FILMS will be shown in two series, a Wednesday night group of international films alternating dates with the Nebraska Union Film Society and a Sunday afternoon program of British comedies.

The first three international films are comedies directed by Ingmar Bergman. Two French classics, Rene Clement's "Forbidden Games" and Jean Cocteau's "Beauty and the Beast" will also be presented.

Italy will be represented by Ermanno Olmi's "The Flute and the Arrow," directed by Arne Susksdorf, is a documentary.

New film trends are embodied in an English film, "The Caretaker," and a Czech movie, "Sweet Light in a Dark Room."

"Nobody Waved Goodbye" has won recognition from the Canadian film industry.

The cinema survey will be completed with three films directed by Americans.
