

NU recruits native scholastic skills

There is no place like Nebraska, according to the 1968 Presidential scholars from Nebraska.

Both Presidential scholars, Cathy Adams of Stanton and Jim Busing of Lincoln, who received $1,000 National Merit Scholarships to the college of their choice, have enrolled as freshmen at the University of Nebraska this fall.

Busing, a graduate of Lincoln Northeast High School, came to Nebraska after receiving many invitations to other schools, because he feels he can get a good education here on the un-

A&S board plans associate group

The Arts and Sciences Advisory Board will form an associates group through interviews to establish better communication with students, according to Nancy Eaton, chairman of the board.

"Since we are such a small group representing such a large college, we feel that we must enlist the students' support," Miss Eaton said.

The chairman added that the Advisory Board will meet soon with the faculties and heads of the respective departments in the College of Arts and Sciences.

AT AN organizational meeting Tuesday night, the board outlined its objectives which include placing a representative on the grade appeals board, according to Miss Eaton.

The group will also work for a language counselors service financed through the work-study program.

It will also further seek to dergraduate level. "You get just what you make of it," he contends regarding the available opportunities.

MISS ADAMS likes Nebraska because it is close to her home and offers courses in all fields in which she is interested.

As the Presidential scholars from Nebraska, the students received a trip to Washington, D.C., where they were honored at a White House reception hosted by President and Mrs. Johnson.

Busing was impressed with the friendliness of the dignitaries and students in Washington.

He had expected the other Presidential scholars to be scholastic stereotypes. "But our group had a cross-section of students with every personality type," he said. "We had athletes, musicians and everything from a Southern California John Birch advocate to a Philadelphia liberal," he added.

Miss Adams said she was awed and impressed with seeing the President, the White House and other things she had previously heard about.

In addition to the National Merit Scholarship, both the scholars are Regents scholarship winners. Miss Adams is majoring in math and taking honors courses in English and philosophy.

"I am not really sure what I want to do," said Miss Adams, but she is now considering a career in math or computer research.

Busing, a physics major, is also taking honors English and a sophomore chemistry course. After his schooling, he would like to work with the government space program.

The Nebraska scholar winners were chosen on the basis of their National Merit Exam and SAT scores.

Original graphics display for sale

Original graphics by Picasso, Chagall, Renoir, Cezanne, Dali, Miro, and Vasarely are among 400 works of art to be displayed at Sheldon Gallery Oct. 3 and 4.

The collection includes lithographs, etchings, woodcuts, drypoints, aquatints, silkscreens, and posters by 75 modern artists.

Assembled by London Grafica Arts, affiliated with major galleries in London, New York and Detroit, the works will be sold at prices from $10 to $3,000.

Art historian Eugene Ivan Schuster clarifies the meaning of "original" in such an exhibit. Between 25 and 125 "of the original print are made." The print plate is then destroyed at the end of such a run.

Although a print is not as unique an item as a painting, it does have a degree of exclusiveness," he concluded.

Grafica Arts comments that, although they are multiple originals, the graphics "possess all the aesthetic qualities of a great oil."

Punch that card, grab that date

Tickets will go on sale today for the "Data Dance" on Oct. 5 in the Union Ballroom. The computer dance, sponsored by the Inter-Dormitory Association, will feature the Sunny Funny Company.

The era of Gertrude Stein and Ford Maddox Ford is captured in the posters of Toulouse-Lautrec to be displayed at a special showing in Sheldon Art Gallery Oct. 3-4.

Counsellors serve themselves at lunch

University personnel served in an unusual capacity at the Nebraska Personnel and Guidance Conference this past weekend.

The conference, which convened Friday at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, consisted of about 400 guidance counselors from across the state.

Problems arose over the noon hour when discovered there was a shortage of help to serve the 400 counselors. Student workers were not available due to class schedules and other conflicts.

E. W. Janike, Dean of University Extension, Dr. A. B. Ward and Clinton Hoover of the Center promptly volunteered their services and were immediately put to work serving the noon meal to the guests.

The men were then joined by secretaries and staff members of the Nebraska Center.

The director of Food Services, Jon M. Marshall, noted that two other conferences were held at the Center at this time, which aggravated the situation.

"We want the workers to have more responsibility and feel a part of our organization," explained president Mimi Baker.

Other discussion centered on making it mandatory for all key infractions in sororities to be sent directly to AWS Sorority Court and on giving AWS courts leeway in setting penalties for some key infractions. Both will be voted on next week.

Teachers College seniors required to be at meeting

Teacher College seniors are asked to attend one of three registration meetings to be held by the Teacher Placement Division on Monday, September 30; Tuesday, October 1; or Thursday, October 3. These meetings will be held at 4:30 p.m. at the University High School Auditorium.

Last year the Division registered 1,872 candidates. This consists of 765 students who later graduated and also experienced teachers who are looking for new positions.

Of the 431 graduates of 1967-68 reporting their position at the date of graduation, 334 or 77.5% took positions in Nebraska. Of this group Lincoln employed 83 teachers.

The search for teachers involved 646 administrators who visited the Placement Office.

Stitching along in Europe Students thread trip sews-up continent

Thirty-two University students participated in a five week "Heritage of Fashion" tour abroad this summer.

One of the members, Patricia Classen, a senior in fashion merchandising, thought that she gained many valuable insights into the fashion world through the tour.

"I LEARNED the most in Paris where we saw many of the designers' homes and out-of-the-way places where hand work was done on clothes," Miss Classen said. She believes that Paris is far from declining as a fashion influence.

Rogene Sliert, also in fashion merchandising, believes the trip was her greatest opportunity to view and understand fashion.

"Fashion starts in Europe," she said. "I was most impressed with London because the famous London Look really came alive."

Miss Sliert enjoyed Carnaby Street and explained that England's style was extreme — skirts very short; hairstyles very long or very short.

The students were accompanied by Dr. Audrey Newton and Mr. Robert Hillestad, assistant professor in the Department of Textiles, Clothing and Design.

Dr. Newton said the enthusiasm generated by the students was tremendous, and that there are plans for a similar tour every two years. The department already has several requests for applications for 1970.

Health aides expand Student Health benefits

As a part of the University Health Center program there are more than 70 students working among their peers to promote general campus health.

These students, known as "Health Aides," are a vital part of the overall health program, according to Dr. S. I. Fuenning, medical director of the Health Center.

"The Health Aide program," said Dr. Fuenning, "had its inception in 1957 as an emergency measure to assist in meeting an Asian Influenza epidemic on campus."

THE PRESENT Health Aide program gradually evolved to September, 1965, when there were health assistants in 46 sororities, fraternities and co-ops.

"During the 1967-68 school year the program was extended to include six dormitory floors, adding 12 Health Aides to the program. Success in this project resulted in further extension of the program into all dormitories in 1968-69."

The Aides are full-time students and maintain an active liaison between the students and the Health Center, he continued. They are trained in first aid and required to take the Public Health 30 courses as a part of their training.

Besides adding a personal link between students and medical personnel, the Health Aides are trained to form a "First Aid Corps" in time of emergency.

An informed Health Aide is able to make his fellow students aware of current campus health problems and special programs.

THE HEALTH Aide is on continual watch for health problems that may develop in his living unit. He attempts to see and correct the health problems of individuals in an early stage.

"In this program," said Dr. Fuenning, "it is the students themselves that administer the health program within their living units. It is the only program of its kind that I know of in the country."

Workers program revamped

AWS plans several major revisions in its workers program, vice president Nancy Eaton Wednesday told the AWS Congress.

The number of workers will be limited to 35, compared to 50 last year. Miss Eaton said the group will perform the traditional tasks of selling Coed Follies tickets and working in the AWS office.

In addition, each worker will be assigned to a committee or an officer to work in a specific area of AWS program.

"We want the workers to have more responsibility and feel a part of our organization," explained president Mimi Baker.

Other discussion centered on making it mandatory for all key infractions in sororities to be sent directly to AWS Sorority Court and on giving AWS courts leeway in setting penalties for some key infractions. Both will be voted on next week.
