Course improves reading

Slow readers have a good opportunity to improve their speed through a University course, according to Jerry Nathan, consultant for the class.

The non-credit course meets twice a week and may last from ten weeks to a full semester with each student working at his own speed.

A MACHINE called the Craig Reader first numbers companying workbook are used in the course.

Slides are fed through the Craig Reader first numbers and letters to help the student widen his visual field, then readings are shown at increasing speeds. Periodically the students are tested for speed and comprehension.

Mr. Nathan said that most students double or even triple their reading speeds.

"A few students have even boosted their speeds to 1200 words a minute. I think the course is very beneficial. Although we have no studies on what the students do several years after taking the class, isolated events have shown us that the reading speeds do hold up," Mr. Nathan commented.

About sixty students are now enrolled in the course.

Summer discrimination incident related

"I've got a nice apartment house — nice tenants," Hock said. "I can't mix 'em up. That's what I'm up against. I can't mix the blacks and the whites."

"My tenants told me that the first time an incident like this came up, they'd all move out. They're nice business people — they're nice apartments.

"YOU EITHER have to accept all colored people or keep them out," Hock testified. Hock also answered that he had never rented to blacks before this incident.

The Commission could only state publicly that it is opposed to such actions.

"Under the present federal statutes it is within the province of the Commission to strongly condemn such practice and recommend to renters and realtors to rent and sell in accordance because it will be the law in a few months," said Jim Raglin, a commission member.

"Mr. Hock owns two apartment houses. There are many, many more property owners in Lincoln adhering to the philosophies and theories of Mr. Hock. We would be remiss in isolating him alone for his actions," Raglin said. "This intimation that a Negro cannot live in a 'so-called' high class apartment is a myth."
