ting and rewarding experience, the 1968-69 Protege Dinsdale. He suggested that program sponsored by Innocents Society began with a kick-off breakfast last

This breakfast featured Richard Westcott, president of First Mid-America Securities in Lincoln. He addressed the students and businessmen in the Nebraska Center.

"The program is designed to give upperclassmen on opportunity to combine theoretical training with practical experience through personal contact with men in cusiness and the professions," according to Bob Bartee. He is program chairman for Innocents.

PARTICIPANTS were selected on the basis of excellence in shcolarship and leadership.

During the year the students are coupled with businessmen and professionals in fields of the students' intersst. They then have the opportunity to work with these men in their offices, thus gaining experience.

An advertising major from Omaha, Gary Grahnquist. said that the program is working well in his case and it makes him feel closer to his profession. Grahnquist says of his counterpart, Edward J. Hirsch, a public relations executive, "He's serving as an out-of-theclassroom-instructor for

The program didn't appear as successful in the case of Richard Scott, Mitchell: because, as Scott said, "We couldn't get together." He went on to say, however, that the program had merit and is an opportunity for students to improve University-community rela-

Also he suggested that the businessmen have an opportunity to become better informed of the purpose and general idea of the program. Baumann commented, "The program has tremendous possibilities and should be expanded."

Dr. Donald Fricke, who has previously been on the student side, is now on the professional side of the program. He said that it has always been a good program and that "participation is good for the kids." He is the counterpart of David E. Murray II of Lincoln, a dentistry major.
