Nebraska tracksters tie for third place

Nebraska's undefeated dual meet track squad closed its season this weekend with an improvement from last year's fourth place Big Eight meet finish by tying Oklahoma for third place.

Other NU placers were Mel Campbell with a fifth place showing in the two-mile event and Mike Randall with a second in the 880-yard run. NU's mile relay team was third.

Garth Case, NU's lone victor, ran a 1:11.7 600-yard dash, and Greg Carlberg's second place mile run were the Husker bright points in the 41st running of the annual Kansas City Auditorium affair. Carlberg, disqualified in the 1,000 yard run Friday for what judges called cutting in too close, ran a 4:13.1 mile, one second behind Kansas State's Jerome Howe's winning clocking.

Frontier Airlines asks to keep youth fares

Frontier Airlines has asked for continuation of its youth fare program despite criticism by a Civil Aeronautics Board examiner that youth fares are discriminatory and should be cancelled.

Frontier contends that the examiner's recommendation fails to give adequate consideration to the special status of young adults who are financially dependent upon their parents and, in general, lack the ability to pay their own full fares.

During the six years that the youth fare has been applicable on Frontier, the carrier found that the fare was economically important to the airline and had a great influence on Frontier's continuing economic and financial progress and toward the elimination of governmental subsidy.

Huskers beat KU, 88-71

by John Dvorak
Nebraskan Staff Writer

The Nebraska Cornhuskers trounced Kansas State 88-71 Saturday but NU coach Joe Cipriano said the team's real test comes on the road later this week.

"We haven't won on the road in the conference yet," Cipriano said. The games against Oklahoma State Thursday evening and Oklahoma Saturday afternoon conclude the basketball season.

The Huskers have been playing better on the road this year, Cipriano said after the K-State victory.

CIPRIANO savors the home court advantage and was especially pleased with the first sellout crowd of the year Saturday.

"We need more of these," he said. "But unfortunately we couldn't get the team going earlier in the year to warrant sellout crowds."

The team is going now, with the defense showing the greatest improvement, according to the NU coach.

THE HUSKER defense held the Big 8's defending champs to 38 per cent shooting from the field. The Wildcats, down by 12 at halftime, saw their slim title hopes all but shattered in the Vine Street barn.

Husker guard Marv Stewart did an excellent job defensively on KSU's veteran guard Steve Honeycutt. Cipriano noted. The Wildcat's leader hit two of 13 shots, finished with five points, and fouled out of the game.

The home crowd, Cipriano said, can determine the winner of a basketball game.

He noted that most Big 8 schools enjoy a great home court advantage, although the Coliseum has gained the reputation among visiting foes as an extremely tough place to visit.

While the coach encourages yelling and screaming, he frowns on booing. Nebraska will try for that elusive first conference road triumph Thursday night at Stillwater, Okla.

"Tough defensively," sizes up the Cowboys, Cipriano said. OSU is fifth nationally in team defense, and they crushed the Cornhuskers earlier this year at Lincoln.

NEBRASKA CONCLUDES the season Saturday against Oklahoma. In that televised clash, NU must stop Garfield Heard, 6-6 Sooner forward who has had serious knee problems this year. However, Heard scored 30 points in his last outing.

The Huskers are fighting to avoid the Big 8 cellar, which Oklahoma owns. If NU can win both games in Oklahoma, the final season record will be 13-13.
