

Hours system to begin requiring parental OK

The experimental hours system will be officially initiated in Sandoz Hall Friday night.

This system, which was initially proposed last December, requires "no hours" for participants who have parental permission.

Sandoz residents are now on a dual-hours system, as girls without parental permission will continue to have regular hours. In effect, the key system has been completely abolished for Sandoz.

I.D.'s were processed Thursday night and will be placed in a "dead file." When girls come in after hours, a nightwatchman will place their I.D.

in an "in file", recording their year in school and the time of arrival — mostly for experiment statistics.

WHEN ASKED IF girls will be sent to AWS court if they fail to return by 7 a.m., Em Hoon, Sandoz residence director, said, "No, girls are only responsible to themselves."

Abuses of the privilege include bringing non-Sandoz University students in on another's I.D. and failure to have men out of the Sandoz lounge by regular hours.

Sandoz residents' comments reflect an extremely favorable attitude toward the experiment. Most agree this is an opportunity to exercise their maturity, responsibility and common sense.

Comments from dormitory residents were:

"I like to think about the security of a nightwatchman... it's much handier than checking out keys."

"My mother said that if I don't have my moral background by now, it's a little late to be teaching me."

"It should prove interesting to see the effect on girls' habits."

Several favor quarter system

present five, since classes would meet either five times a week for 50 minutes or three times a week for 80 minutes.

WEBER, THE chemical engineering department chairman, favors this avenue of approach. Five or six courses in a quarter would be too much, he feels. Students should concentrate on three or four.

Faculty members agree on one thing at least — there are certain advantages to the quarter plan, but there are a number of disadvantages too.

Dr. Donald G. Hanway, chairman of agronomy, dislikes the quarter system. There would be a lot of starting and stopping, he pointed out. There would be an additional registration period, which is not desirable.

Mrs. Irma N. Laase, assistant director of registration, agreed. "It would be just another registration period. We don't have enough help in the registration office even now. Increased registration would certainly cost more."

ENOUGH DISCONTINUITY exists in the schedule already, according to Dr. Donald E. Allison, chairman of Germanic and Slavic languages.

"A quarter system would heighten this discontinuity and place greater pressure on faculty members," he said.

Too much time is spent shaking down classes under the quarter plan, according to Dr. Floyd Hoover, professor of secondary education, who has taught under it.

"By the time you get acquainted with the students, the quarter is over," he said. Hoover is also fearful of the course reworking and revamping that would be necessary if a change were made.

Hayes acknowledged such problems, noting that all he course syllabi would have to be redone, an undertaking of some proportions. Individual departments are continually looking at their curriculums, but a complete change all at once has never been attempted.

ADVANCED PLANNING could solve these problems, he said.

Dr. Royce H. Knapp, regents professor of education, understands the problems involved. "We could do a better job in Teachers College with a quarter system," he said.

Next issue — the case for the modified semester system plan.

NU literary contests offer cash prizes

Three literary contests open to both graduate and undergraduate students at the University have been announced by English professor Mordecai Marcus.

Marcus said that the Academy of American Poets Award of $100 is being offered for the seventh year. Poems submitted may be of any length and form and on any subject. Marcus suggested that entries consist of not fewer than 25 or more than 200 lines.

The Mari Sandoz Fiction Awards of $50, $30 and $20, made possible through a fund initiated by Mari Sandoz, will again be held this year. He said that no more than two short stories from 3,000 to 7,000 words may be submitted. There are no restrictions as to theme or style, he said.

The third contest, the Vreeland Awards, is open only to English major Marcus said. There are two awards of $300 each, one to a graduate and the other to an undergraduate.

Entries may be submitted to the English department office in Seaton Hall.

World luncheon held weekly on Thursdays

A world community luncheon — that's what International Week is all about — foreign students and Americans getting together for lunch and conversation at noon Thursdays at UMHE.

Last Thursday ladies from Christ

United Methodist Church served lunch for 50 cents. Gottfried Voelker, a graduate student in economics, showed a film on the Rhineland. In the past, foreign students have given talks about their country and have considered American-foreign student relations.

Big 8 race tight
The Big Eight basketball race could end in one of five ways depending on the outcome of this Saturday's final league games.
Colorado and Kansas are tied for lead with 9-4 records, while Kansas State is 8-5 and Iowa State is 7-5. Kansas plays at Kansas State, Missouri is at Colorado and Iowa State is at Oklahoma Thursday and at Oklahoma State Saturday.
If Kansas wins and Missouri beats Colorado, KU will win the title, but if KU loses and Colorado wins, Colorado will win. If both win, Kansas and Colorado will have a one-game playoff.
If Kansas and Colorado lose and Iowa State drops one of its last two games then, Kansas State, Colorado and K-State would tie for the title. K-State would not be in the playoff since it last represented the conference in the NCAA.
If Kansas and Colorado lose and Iowa State wins both its remaining games, then Kansas and K-State will have a one-game playoff since they were the last two teams to represent the league in NCAA play. Then Colorado and Iowa State would meet in a one-game playoff at Manhattan.
