

Administration meets with black candidate

University officials have already met with one prospective black counselor, Thomas Windham, who is the requested choice of the Afro-American Collegiate Society.

"We talked to Mr. Windham about a possible part time job," said Dr. Harry Canon, director of the counseling service. Canon would not divulge his reactions about the meeting at this time, however.

Another meeting is scheduled early this week, Windham said, which will involve Dean of Student Affairs G. Robert Ross, among others.

"He has the final say so," Windham said. "I have to see him."

Canon has not talked with other prospective black counselors. No one else has been recommended by the Afro-American Collegiate Society, he said.

Several problems have already been encountered. As of yet there are no funds to pay for a black counselor, Canon said. The counseling service is committed to finding a qualified person, he continued, but they are scarce.

"There has never been a black counselor at the University of Nebraska, much to our chagrin," Canon said.

Windham has a BA and an MA from New Mexico Highlands University. He has a year towards a Ph.D at the University of Wyoming. Currently a psychology teacher at Nebraska Wesleyan University, Windham is married, but has no children.

Windham said he will be free from contractual obligations at Wesleyan at the end of the current school year.

Week's schedule released

Master's Week, April 21-22, will feature eight outstanding alumni chosen for their ability to meet and converse with people, according to Master's Week Chairman Cheryl Tritt.

She said that Masters Week is designed to give students the opportunity to talk informally with various successful alumni.

During the two-day program, the returning Masters will eat meals in living units and also have evening discussion groups. These evening discussions are open to all students and faculty, Miss Tritt said.

She continued that the Masters will all be at a coffee in the Nebraska Union Monday, April 21 from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. The coffee is open to all students and faculty.

"This is about the only time that the Masters will be together as a group," Miss Tritt added.

The eight University alumni who will participate in the program are:

Vernice Anderson, secretary of the National Science Foundation Board, Washington, D.C.

—Edwin J. Faulkner, president of Woodmen Accident and Life, Lincoln.

F. Walker Johnson, a geologist from Greenwich, Conn.

—Otto Kotouc, Jr., president of the Home State Bank and Trust Company, Humboldt.

—Carl W. Olson, president of Olson Construction Co., Lincoln.

—Marvin G. Schmid, an Omaha attorney.

—Edmund Steeves, director of field operations for the General Motors Public Relations Staff, Detroit, Mich.

—Norbert T. Tiemann, governor of Nebraska and a Wausau banker.

Masters week schedules are available in the Nebraska Union.

Outstanding professor to be named

Who will be this year's Builders Outstanding Professor? It might be your friendly adviser or the professor who flunked you last semester. Or maybe it's your favorite instructor this semester. This man will be named and recognized Tuesday at Honors Convocation.

Each spring Builders sponsors the Outstanding Professor Award, but the actual selection of the recipient is done entirely by the students. Last fall, nomination ballots were sent to all living units and about five professors from each college were chosen. At balloting in December, the Outstanding Professor was chosen from these nominees by representatives voting from all living units.

Selection was based on the professor's ability to relate and communicate in the classroom. This ability to "teach" is a rare gift and one worthy of honor, according to a Builder's spokesman. This year's Outstanding Professor Award will go to a man who has been at the University for many years. His faithful service and winning personality have encouraged and inspired all who know him, especially his students, the spokesman said.

Second semester, the Outstanding Professor Committee concentrated on raising $500 for the award.

KUON-TV to produce series on Negro

A $200,000 Ford Foundation grant has been given KUON-TV as one of 15 national stations to produce a series spotlighting the Negroes' role in the development of our nation.

KUON will produce a series of seven color programs aimed at the black American's role in the settlement of the Great Plains, according to station program manager Bill Oxley. He said the station has been researching the subject for some time and has been anxious to produce the program.

Oxley said that a major portion of the personnel used in the development and production of the series, scheduled to begin broadcast early in 1970, will be black, particularly the historians and consultants.

Most of the researchers will be graduate students who could use the project toward obtaining their degrees, Oxley said. Neither the producer-director nor any other personnel has been selected at this time.

Plans also included hiring a well-known black entertainer to act as host for the series. Oxley said it is important that the entertainer be nationally identifiable because the series, although being produced in Nebraska, hopefully will achieve nationwide distribution.

"We have an exciting story to tell," Oxley said, adding that the black man has had a great deal to do with the founding of Great Plains Society.
