

Drop and add more efficient process

Drop and Add is a more efficient process this semester, according to the man at the other end of that long line, Gerald D. Bowker, Director of Registration and Records.

A new arrangement of Drop and Add processing tables in the Nebraska Union ballroom has streamlined the process, Bowker said Tuesday.

For students going through Drop and Add the procedure is unchanged from previous semesters — see your adviser, fill out forms in triplicate, then stand in line.

By the end of the week, most students have been processed, and the time appointment cards used in the first part of the week are dispensed with, Bowker said.

Drop and Add began on the first day of classes, Monday, September 22, is the last day to add a course, and drops are allowed until October 15.

There are no plans to radically change the Drop and Add process next semester, though Bowker said he is always open to suggestions.

He added that the pre-registration system introduced last spring has helped the University's academic departments to plan earlier and more accurately for classes, thus reducing schedule conflicts.

Also, more students pre-registered and adjusted their schedules during free Drop and Add last May, Bowker said.

The real scheduling problem lies deeper than the registration process. As long as there is a shortage of classroom space and teachers, there will be schedule conflicts to be resolved, Bowker said.

While the building program, and added faculty members have improved the situation, remodeling of existing classrooms and increased enrollment are always a step ahead, he added.

The line stretched for two blocks Monday as returning city campus students waited for permits to repair class schedules.

Fashion show planned by University Dames

A Fall Fashion Show is planned for the first monthly meeting of the University Dames a University organization open to all U. of N. student wives.

No registration is needed for the fashion program to be shown Thursday, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the Brandeis fifth floor auditorium.

Appropriate clothes for the working wife, formal dresses, casual clothes and maternity wear will be featured, according to Mrs. Phyllis Peterson, speaker. A social hour will follow the show.

Former adviser dies during summer

Dr. Robert J. Cranford, former faculty adviser to the Daily Nebraskan, died August 8 in Gainesville, Fla.

Cranford, a professor in the School of Journalism from 1957 to 1967, was named in 1961 as the nation's outstanding college newspaper adviser by the National Council of College Publication Advisers.

A professor at the University of Florida at the time of his death, Cranford had a doctor's degree from Iowa State University.

He was a member of journalism societies Kappa

Tau Alpha and Sigma Delta Chi, and had been a copy editor for the Lincoln Journal.

CREIGHTON'S CONTRADICTIONARY SHIRT
A NEW POINT OF VIEW. The Contradictory Shirt. Creighton's really done it this time! They've created a shirt that's both subtle and bold. Classic yet contemporary. The random width stripes speak for themselves; yet as you can see they speak softly. The long point pin-it-or-not collar is a fashion that's become a tradition. It's in a fine combed cotton, and it's also available with our Brookside button down collar.
