

ASUN Council is progressive

A method for selecting membership in the Council on Student Life, approved by an ASUN committee last spring and passed by the NU Board of Regents at its July 28 meeting, spices the agenda for the first student senate meeting Wednesday.

"The Council on Student Life (CSL) is certainly a progressive step for the college student," ASUN President Bill Chaloupka says, "but it is, at the same time, no cure-all for student problems."

The idea, an outgrowth of a committee formed last semester to investigate the implementation and the facilitation of the student in the academic community, theoretically will affect the students' out-of-class affairs.

"But," Chaloupka pointed out, "the Council should not be viewed as a cure-all as some persons have viewed it. It should be more effective than what we have now, but the work of the Council is still subject to Regent approval. It has to encounter some difficulty because students and the Board of Regents, quite naturally, differ in their views and roles."

Membership

The Council on Student Life will be composed of 15 members, eight students and seven faculty members. A member of the undergraduate Dean's Council will serve as chairman, and an executive of Student Affairs will serve as secretary.

Two professional staff members of the student affairs office, as well as Chaloupka, will serve on the CSL. Seven students will be chosen by an ASUN selection committee.

Persons interested in Council positions should contact the ASUN office. Candidates are required to have the regular qualifications for any extracurricular activity. This, Chaloupka said, basically means having an average of at least 2.0 and be a full-time student in good standing.

"The Council will be dealing with rules that affect students directly," Chaloupka said. "Essentially, this means out-of-classroom activities. Students haven't had a majority voice in such rules in the past. With the Council, students should be able to control their lives much like people in other parts of the community."

The CSL, which should be in operation in about two weeks, according to Chaloupka, is more of a policy involvement committee and will not over-extend itself legally. "It's more of a legislative body than a judicial body," he says.

The CSL, for the most part, affects dormitory regulations, including issues of visitation and established hours. Judicial structure, fee structure and the publication board will also come under the auspices of the CSL.

The role of the CSL, Chaloupka explained, is to assume current responsibility of the senate committee on student affairs and its subcommittees. "The Council essentially is replacing a large and powerful committee," he said.

Other major items on Wednesday's 4 p.m. Union agenda include a discussion of the proposed 1969-70 budget and the establishment of a new committee.

Final budget

"We're in the final stages of straightening out the budget," Chaloupka said. "It should be finalized in about a week."

A Community Services Committee will be approved Wednesday, Chaloupka said. Plans call for the non-profit student co-operative to establish a discount record store.

Enrollment skyrockets, passes 18,000 mark

University enrollment soared over the 18,000 mark Monday, with hundreds of registrations still expected. The figures for graduate registration, night classes, and degree candidates, and over one hundred students accepted after the July 1 deadline, will not be complete until the end of the week.

Lee Chatfield, dean of Student Affairs, said Tuesday that enrollment should reach 19,500 on the two Lincoln campuses and the Medical Center in Omaha, with 12,500 at NU of Omaha.

The figures indicate a five per cent increase in freshmen and sophomore classes, boosted by the high number of freshmen holdovers with less than 28 hours.

Clues to the higher enrollment first came in July, when registration workers reported classes closed that usually are not filled until general registration in September.

NU enrollment jumped from 9,000 to 16,000 in the early 1960's, but recent growth has been less rapid. Chatfield attributed the sudden rise to the coming of age of the war boom babies, and to a soaring "interest factor."

"The baby boom leveled off, but the interest factor continues to rise, producing larger freshman classes," he added.

Chatfield admitted that enrollment had exceeded the University's expectations, but expressed confidence the institution could accommodate the overflow. "We have about 500 more students than we had planned, but when figures get above 19,000, what is 500?"
