

Innocents Society seeks 'direction'

The Innocents Society is now in the process of seeking a new direction and purpose for the organization.

Dave Buntain, president of the Innocents, said Wednesday that "members of the senior men's honorary have questioned whether "there was any need for the organization."

He feels that the Innocents is no longer a spirit organization as it was originally planned and the honorary is now "seeking a new direction."

According to Buntain there is a need to recognize outstanding senior men, but "in the past it has not been wholly satisfactory."

Buntain said the Innocents will do more this year than just exist as an honorary informing the administration of student opinion as it has done in the past. He also said there is a consensus among the members that the society has to reorient itself to meet the needs of the students.

The 13-member honorary is planning several programs to further improve the communication between all members of the University community.

The Innocents have planned a "Hyde Park" type of program featuring President Joseph Soshnik and Vice-Chancellor G. Robert Ross on Oct. 21 at the Student Union.

The program is designed to increase the communication between the administration and the students. "If this is successful, maybe we can have more dialogs the rest of the year," Buntain said.

He added the Innocents are planning a protege program involving 50 to 100 junior and senior men who are interested in pursuing professional careers.

The program will match the students with businessmen or professionals in their same fields from Lincoln. Buntain said of the program:

"The idea is to encourage communication between the community and some of our junior and senior men."

The Innocents are also considering increasing the number of members and criteria to broaden the membership base of the society. In the past the Innocents have been charged of representing too narrow a base of students.

Must increase

Buntain said the Innocents Society with its 13-man membership was originally organized when the University had only 3,000 students. He feels that since the University has grown to 19,000 the Innocents must increase their membership to better serve the student community.

The society proposed an amendment to the preamble of their constitution Monday to indicate their change of purpose. The present form of the preamble states the honorary is organized to promote "student spirit and activity."

The proposed amendment restates the purpose of the Innocents as "the furthering of understanding between all members and all areas of the University community."

The Innocents approved the proposed amendment, but to become effective it must also be approved by the Executive Committee of the Alumni Innocents Association. The undergraduate Innocents are confident that the Alumni will approve the proposed amendment.

Nebraska colleges plan feasts, fasts

A fast and a feast are two of the diverse activities planned by Nebraska colleges and universities participating in the Vietnam moratorium on Oct. 15.

Dana College in Blair, Neb., will begin its observance at 7 a.m., according to Dana moratorium committee member Pat Bracken.

That hour will mark the beginning of a 24-hour fast for moratorium participants. Bracken explained that the fasters plan to stand in silent vigil at the steps of the college cafeteria during meal hours on the 15th. However, they will not disrupt the food service, he said.

Also starting at 7 a.m., the list of Nebraska war dead is to be read over a campus-wide loudspeaker system, he continued.

A chapel service for the war victims is to be held later in the morning and a discussion on Vietnam in the Campus Center starting will initiate the afternoon activities.

Bracken said that the protesters plan to migrate to Omaha for activities there at about 3 p.m. A vigil in Blair will begin at that evening, he continued.

Seminars He explained that teachers at the school will be holding seminar sessions on Vietnam in their classes. There will also be a special issue of the student newspaper published on the war.

Activities at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln will begin at 10 a.m. with a speaker, according to moratorium committee member Wally Randall.

The speaker will be Dr. Robert Keohane of the National Moratorium Committee, he said. There will be informal discussion groups with Dr. Keohane as well as his speech, Randall added.

At 12:30 p.m. a symposium is planned on "The Nixon Administration and Alternatives to Present Vietnam Policies."

There will be a program with Nebraska Selective Service Director Col. Lee Liggett, at 2 p.m., he said. The program is to deal with alternatives to the present draft system.

At 3:30 p.m. the University will send a large group of people to participate in the city-wide march on the capitol, he continued.

A program of folksinging and protest songs is planned at 7 p.m. followed by an 8 p.m. war memorial service to be held at the First Methodist Church.

Randall said that there would also be an all day war referendum on Oct. 14 and a program of films that evening.

Unanimous The Wesleyan program has the unanimous approval of the Faculty Senate, he continued. Faculty members have been asked to cancel their classes, discuss the war in class, or not schedule any tests or exams on the 15th, he said.

Students participating in the moratorium at John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo will wear black arm bands, according to David Wood, assistant to the college president. He said that some literature in support of the moratorium will also be distributed on campus.

UNO Activities at the University of Nebraska at Omaha will begin with a distribution of leaflets at about 8 a.m., said Bruce Arnold, moratorium committee member.

There will be an open forum on Vietnam in the student union beginning at 9:30 a.m. Ed Gargen, a speaker from Chicago, will speak at 10:30 a.m.

Teachers have been asked to discuss Vietnam in their classes but have not been asked to call them off, he said.

UNO moratorium participants will also take part in a city-wide rally to begin at 4 p.m. in Elmwood Park. The rally will end with a candlelight parade to Memorial Park in the evening, Arnold said.

Doane College in Crete will kick off activities with a 10 a.m. speaker.

Cecil Williams from San Francisco will be speaking on the war as it pertains to blacks, according to Doane committee member Rick Nations. Discussions are to follow the speech, he said.

At noon there will be a symbolic meal of rice for the protesters. Donations to further the anti-Vietnam work will be taken at this time, Nations added.

Films on Vietnam are planned at 1:30 and a migration to take part in Lincoln activities is planned at 2:30.

Some individual teachers are planning on cancelling their classes, he said.

Some cancellations The student senate at Kearney State College has passed a resolution in support of the moratorium, according to George Reynolds, Kearney professor of journalism.

He explained that there are some educational programs planned. These are to include the showing of films and some discussion groups.

There will also be a memorial service for war dead.

He added that there has been no request for teachers to cancel classes.
