Irish statesman to speak

The former prime minister of Northern Ireland, Captain Terence O'Neill, will speak at the East Campus Student Union Wednesday at 2 p.m.

O'Neill served as prime minister of Northern Ireland for six years before retiring in April, 1969. During his years in office he pressed for reforms to relieve the grievances of Northern Ireland's Catholic minority.

The topic of O'Neill's speech will be "Northern Ireland — Can There Be Peace?" His speech will deal with the current trouble between the Catholics and the Protestants, the history of that province, and the differences between Northern and Southern Ireland.

The London Daily Telegraph described O'Neill in April as "the one politician willing to lead this province (Northern Ireland) of 1,500,000 people out of the dark shadows of religious strife into the bright new era of improved community relations."

"He sought to do this with an enlightened policy of moderation and conciliation, and a programme of social and political reform unprecedented in Ulster's turbulent 48-year history."

Despite his resignation, O'Neill still remains a member of the Northern Ireland House of Commons. He has served in the government of the province for over 20 years, with his first post being parliamentary secretary of the ministry of health. He has also served as deputy speaker and a chairman of ways and means, minister of Home Affairs, and minister of Finance.

O'Neill's latest book, Ulster

At The Crossroads, has been published recently. The former Prime Minister was educated at Eton and served with the Irish Guards during World War II.

Think selfishly about your own career before you decide on one with Du Pont.

Many have found career enrichment at Du Pont. This comes from being handed a ball and being expected to run with it. From working with top people, from growing in a company where the opportunities are always wide open and the projects are often way out.

Many have found professional fulfillment and have built a very full, varied and happy life as "Du Ponters."

Others have found, after working at Du Pont, that their professional interest lay in teaching, in further study or in an industry that offered even wider scope in their particular discipline. All of these men left Du Pont far better qualified professionally than when they came.

Be selfish. But be honest. You've put in a lot of tough years to get your degree. Your allegiance lies with a professional discipline.

Why, then, must you decide now to plight your trust to a company for life? Don't. Join a company first. If it doesn't advance you within that professional discipline, well, you're not married to it.

So talk to the Du Pont recruiter. If he offers you something, think of it as a professional challenge, not a proposal of marriage.
