Protest needs SS OK

The Moratorium Committee must meet with the Secret Service before plans are completed for a non-violent demonstration Monday when Vice-President Spiro Agnew appears in Lincoln.

Mike Shonsey, coordinator of the Moratorium Committee, said Thursday that the Committee has received permission from the Lincoln police to demonstrate Monday. However, he added that the Committee must inform the Secret Service of the demonstration plans.

Shonsey said he did not expect the Secret Service to oppose the demonstration plans.

"We hope by the demonstration to show the Vice President that there are people in Nebraska who oppose the policies of the Nixon Administration," added Shonsey.

Lincoln Police Chief Joe Carroll said Thursday that he didn't anticipate any trouble concerning the Agnew demonstration. But he added, "We'll be down there if there is any trouble."

Carroll said he did not know how many policemen or Secret Service agents will be at the Tiemann dinner. However, the Lincoln Police will be meeting with the Secret Service Friday to discuss security plans.

Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann said of the demonstration: "Although I understand the feelings of those who wish to protest against the war and the Nixon Administration, I feel that a demonstration won't do any good."

Tiemann stated that the Agnew demonstration would give certain senators in the Unicameral "fuel to pour on the fire against any new 1971 appropriations to the University."

Commenting on the Vietnam War the Governor said, "Agnew is against the War and the Nixon Administration is doing the best it can to disengage the conflict in Vietnam."

The University Moratorium committee's position paper was not as complimentary of the Nixon Administration:

"Nixon Administration policy is vague. The president has made statements that he is basing his rate of withdrawal on such imponderables as pacification and Vietnamization. These are subjective criteria which would lead us to believe that his motives are not above politics. It would seem that the President is not conducting the war to insure self-government for the Vietnamese, but rather to insure his own re-election..."

"Domestically, the President has been as ambivalent as he has been in his foreign policy. Perhaps a year is too short a time to judge the effectiveness of his programs, but it is not too soon to judge his intentions..."

"Such episodes as the nomination of Clement Haynesworth and G. Harold Carswell, the ABM issue, the H.E.W. veto and the firing of A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the outspoken efficiency expert, show the President to be misleading and contradictory. How is it possible to find the H.E.W. bill inflationary and not the overruns in defense spending?"

The position paper stated that the purpose of the Moratorium is the education of Americans. The paper also claims that the President is making a minimal effort to solve America's environmental problems.

The Nebraska Free University (NFU) spent only $480 first semester of the $2500 allocated by ASUN for this year's program, according to John Marcotte, NFU chairman.

Hopefully, second semester NFU classes will go into more depth and use the resource fund, Marcotte added. Registration for second semester classes begins at the end of February.

The $2500 allotment is the largest sum ever funded for NFU," said Diane Theisen, vice president of ASUN, said. It's fine that more money wasn't spent, she added.

Marcotte said expenses were so small because for the first time money was put into a resource fund that classes could use for special projects. Because the fund idea was new this year, people were hesitant to take advantage of it, Marcotte said. He thinks this will change second semester.

Both Miss Theisen and Marcotte termed first semester NFU as "fairly successful." Some 700 students enrolled in 34 courses, originally, although the usual drop out problem continued.

"Drop outs are a problem that seems to be inherent in the Free University," Marcotte said. But he added that drop outs were fewer than in other NFU semesters.

Average class size was 15-20, the chairman said. The perennially popular judo and folk guitar courses each began with 80 enrollees. Marcotte said that "only a few" courses, such as the class on communications freedom, didn't meet because of lack of interest.

Plans are proceeding on schedule for this semester, Marcotte said. NFU may add courses on film-making and existentialism. Other popular courses from last semester will probably be repeated, although no final decisions have been made.
