WE NEED PEOPLE.

To help people to help themselves, you've got to start by liking them. And helping people is what life insurance is all about.

As a life insurance representative, you'll enjoy the great personal satisfaction which comes from helping people to provide financial security for their families. And you'll enjoy a career which is interesting, useful, and financially rewarding.

If you know people who are interested, educated, and ready to go, have them call or stop in today. Maybe we can show them how to put their interest in people to work.

A group calling themselves "radical capitalists" has formed on campus "to provide an alternative to the traditionally conservative and liberal student organizations."

"Individualists for a Radical Society (IRS) was inspired to form because all the student groups around campus are the same," said Jackylene Hood, a member of the group's executive board.

"We are radical, but not necessarily in any one direction," explained Mrs. Hood, a senior in education.

Mrs. Hood's husband David recently fled to Canada to avoid the draft. She plans to join him after receiving her degree.

The new group existed Informally last year, but decided to become a bona fide student organization this year. They have about 25 members.

"We're generally opposed to the notion of power as it is viewed by groups striving for it," she said. They dislike the idea of black power or women's power.

"We object to a government run solely on the basis of power," she added. "Many groups then get upset if they don't have a share in that power."

IRS is also opposed to invasions of freedom, whether they are "invasions by the Russian or the American government."

IRS is affiliated with similar groups at Denver University, the University of Colorado, the Society of New Intellectuals at Stanford University and RA ICAPS (Radicals for Capitalists) at Toronto, Capital.

In the future, the group plans to sponsor a lecture by Charles Stubblefield, assistant professor of English at NU. They also are planning to host gubernatorial candidate Clifton Batchelder of Omaha at a meeting.

"We have a push on creativity," said Mrs. Hood.
"We believe that people produce wealth and, therefore wealth should not be distributed. We are more interested in creating more wealth so it won't have to be distributed."

CBA sophomores receive gold keys

Ten sophomore students at the University of Nebraska have been awarded William Gold Scholarship Keys by the College of Business Administration for their academic achievement as freshmen.

Charles S. Miller, dean of the college, announced the awards which are given to the top first-year students in business administration. The scholarship keys are in honor of William Gold, founder of the Gold Department Store in Lincoln. They were first awarded in 1925.

Recipients were Harlan S.

Teaching council

Magrath added that another aspect of the Council is to promote better communications between academic departments and faculty members.

PART OF the effort to achieve better communication is a booklet being prepared by Council member Wesley C. Meierhenry. He explained that the booklet will contain condensed descriptions of teaching innovations going on in each academic department.

Each entry includes a short description of the innovation, its method of use, materials needed to conduct the program and the name of the person to contact for more information, Meierhenry said.

He explained that the book may be distributed to each faculty member. If not, it will be sent to each department office and liaison contact.

"THE FUNCTION of the book will be to help faculty members with similar ideas communicate," Meier henry said. "Instructors should be able to get ideas from the book and compare notes on similar projects."

"The Council also sponsors small projects proposed by faculty members," Magrath said. "These are projects which cannot be accommodated within department budgets but may lead to significant curricular and instructional improvements."

The Council currently has an annual budget of $25,000 granted through administration general funds, he continued. It will request more funds in the University budget for the next legislative session, he said.

THE COUNCIL consists of six faculty members and two student members as well as the Dean of Faculties and a representative from the office of student affairs.
