But NU's students still bush

The bushiest part of Nebraska's usually bush student basketball fans is that they had to be at their best at the worst time.

What a dubious tribute for the country's foremost basketball coach, Henry P. Iba of Oklahoma State University!

IBA, the only coach to direct two United States Olympic basketball teams, was honored before the Nebraska-OSU game by University president Joseph Soshnik, but dishonored during the game by Nebraska's student body cheering (?) sections.

Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano expressed concern before the OSU game about the barrage of paper cups and assorted other debris which customarily greets "bad calls" by Big Eight Conference officials against Nebraska at home games.

CIPRIANO, who has pleaded for more decent manners from his following (even using the public address system), again received no results.

Cip, who enjoys a good home court advantage but who does not enjoy a bad reputation, points out that there is a difference between being loud and being rude.

"You can have the same advantage at home without throwing things," Cip said after the Oklahoma game last week. "We've got to do something about the way we protest calls."

It's hard to destroy enthusiasm, Cip added, but easy to destroy an image.

"I hope this kind of stuff quits happening," Cip said.

Almost buried among the students' behavioral problems was a 61-55 Nebraska victory.

THE CORNHUSKERS jousted with the Cowboys in a 24-24 first half standoff. Omaha sophomore Mike Petersen's individual 7-point burst midway through the first half allowed that development for Nebraska.

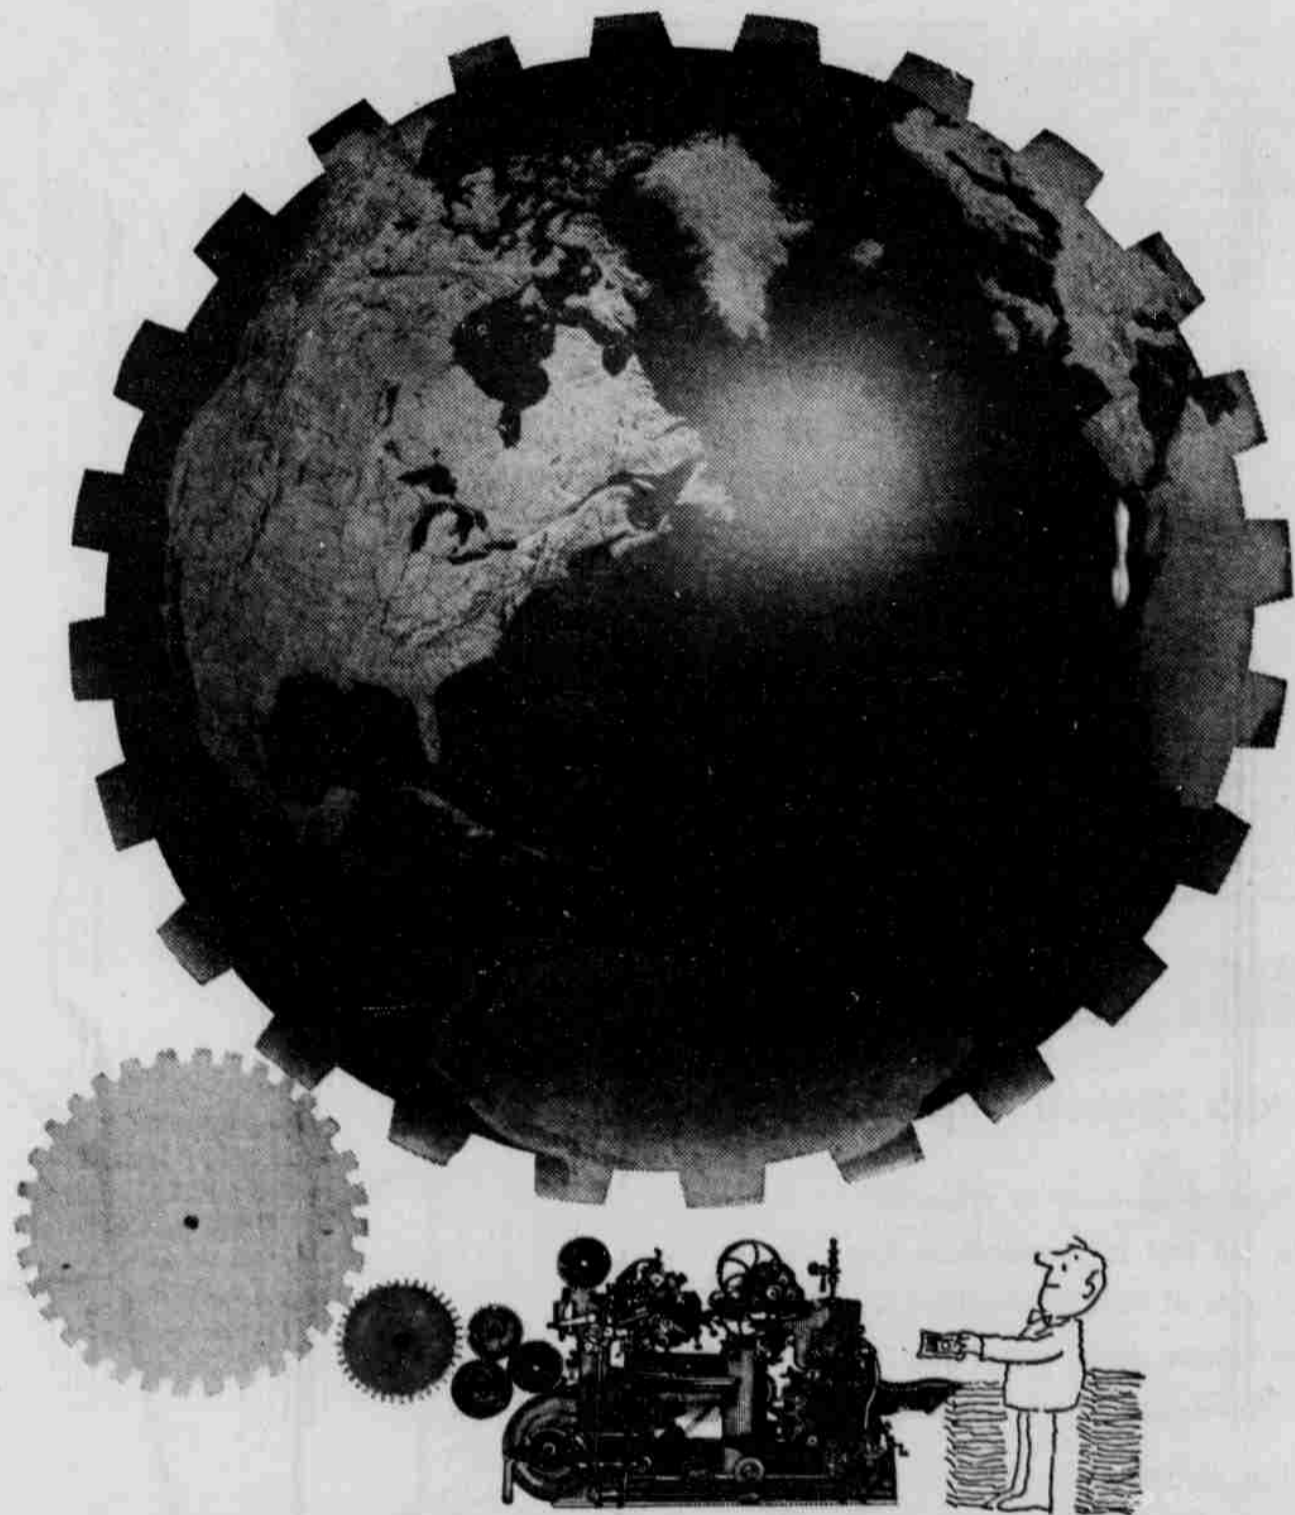

Then senior guard Tom Scantlebury emerged as the second a half Cornhusker catalyst, scoring 14 points, including eight straight in a three minute span which increased Nebraska's lead from 48-44 with 5:54 remaining to 56-48 with 2:27 left.

Sophomore forward Chuck Jura had kept the Huskers alive before Scantlebury went to work. Jura accounted for six straight points and blocked three Cowboy shots in a four minute stretch.

We need help making the world turn.

Like it or not, money is what makes things happen in this world. In business. In government. In all the worldly affairs of man.

It takes money to discover medicines, to rebuild ghettos, to educate children, to feed, clothe, and house humanity. Money is an essential ingredient in solving man's day to day problems—and in promoting his century to century progress.

In short, money makes the world turn. We're the world's largest bank and putting money to work is our business. We think it's an important enough business to hire the best people we can find to run it. A Bank of America personnel representative will be interviewing on your campus soon. If you want to make a career of making the world turn, make an appointment.
