

Cyclone ace eyes records

Cain 'double trouble'

Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano will have to figure a way for the Huskers to stop six players at a time against Iowa State Saturday afternoon.

Cyclone coach Glen Anderson fields only five players at a time, but after an Iowa State game, opposing coaches usually feel like they have tangled with six.

THE CYCLONE starting lineup includes Jim Abrahamson, Dave Collins, Jack DeVilder and Aaron Jenkins. The fifth and sixth man is Bill Cain.

"That man (Cain) has to be twins — no one player can be in so many key spots at once," said a Kansas sports writer after Cain lifted Iowa State past Kansas, 91-89, earlier in the season.

"When the going gets really tough, you can figure that the defensive hand that is causing the opposition the most trouble will belong to Cain," Anderson said.

"Bill does a great job for us on offense and in rebounding, but very few people realize how great he is on defense," he added. "He not only takes good care of his own man but the way he helps out with teammates who get caught makes him even more valuable."

Cain, who will close out his career against Nebraska likely will break a pair of Big Eight records in his last two games.

(Iowa State played at Colorado Thursday night).

THE WHITE Plains, N.Y. senior needed only two free throws to break ex-Cyclone Don Smith's all time Big Eight career mark of 502.

He needs 25 rebounds in the two games to reach a conference total of 212, one more than Bill Bridges pulled down for Kansas in 1959.

Cain, an all-conference performer as a junior, ranks second to Smith in Cyclone career scoring and rebounding statistics.

He is currently the conference's leading rebounder with 187 and a 15.6 per game average. He also ranks fourth in scoring at a 16.8 points per game and 201 total points.

MORE THAN a dozen pro scouts have been in Ames this season to watch Cain. This is exactly 11 more than scouted him in high school when Anderson accidentally discovered his future star in a county tournament game.

The Big Eight Conference basketball scramble would make a good commercial for Avis . . . we're No. 2, but we try harder.

It will take a lot of championship effort Saturday for a team to emerge in the conference runner up spot.

Nebraska will have more than an eye on a second place league finish — the Huskers have an issue to settle with challenger Iowa State, which has outdueled Nebraska in the clubs' last two Lincoln meetings.

The Cornhuskers cannot gain an undisputed second place finish in the regionally-televised game, but they can secure a tie for the spot, if other Big Eight games develop in the right fashion.

For instance, Kansas must lose at home against Kansas State, Oklahoma must lose at Oklahoma State (Henry Iba's last game), and Missouri must lose at Colorado.

If such games materialize, a 5-way second place deadlock will include Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado and Oklahoma with final 7-7 records.

The Cornhuskers, however, must break the Cyclone jinx besides depending upon all developments.

Nebraska, getting improving performances from frontliners Chuck Jura and Bob Gratopp, gets the favored role over the Cyclones, having beaten them in the Big Eight Conference tournament while dropping a 2-point decision at Ames.

Sophomore Jura and senior

Gratopp will join Leroy Chalk in battling ISU's Bill Cain, the Big 8's leading rebounder.

Cain has inflicted most damage in Nebraska's five regular season losses to the Cyclones in the last three years.

Cain also presents a big offensive threat with a 16.8 average. Forwards Aaron Jenkins (14.5) and Dave Collins (11.1) add to the inside threat.

The Cyclones backcourt with Jack DeVilder and Jim Abrahamson offers considerable speed for Nebraska's Tom Scantlebury and Sam Martin.

Batten leads NU gymnasts

Hoppy Batten's victory in the last event, the horizontal bars, gave Nebraska's gymnastics team a 140-55-130.0 win over Western Michigan at the Coliseum Wednesday.

Larry Evermann captured the side horse championship for the Cornhuskers, who next host Wichita State Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Coliseum.

Meely sparks Colorado past ISU, 107-79

Boulder, Colo. — Colorado received 27 points and 20 rebounds from Cliff Meely here Thursday night in outclassing Iowa State, 107-79.

The total was the second highest total scored in Buff history, surpassed only by the 112 scored last year against Arizona State.

THE WIN lifted CU's conference record to 6-7, keeping its hopes alive for a tie for second place in the final standings.

Iowa State, which led through the first 10 minutes of the game, was paced by Bill Cain's 22 points. Substitute forward Rick Engel added 13 points.
