

East Campus is revolting

Barricades are near completion as East campus "digs-in" to preserve their vital bodily fluids. Workmen here complete a span as loud cheers ring from both sides.

Barricades went up today to protect East Campus from "those city folks".

The leader of the Fortified Milk Group threatened violence if any dude tried to break through the corral gates.

"We are going to start our own colony out here," the leader said. "We are sick — of being under-represented on student governing bodies and of the DAILY NEBRASKAN constantly ignoring us."

He noted that the DAILY NEBRASKAN had failed to cover such awe-inspiring events as the plowing contest, the Clifford Hardin award to the farmer out standing in his field and the Kellogg Center crackle contest.

Another East campus source complained of the stereotyped picture of the East Campus student.

"People think we wear cowboy boots and 10-gallon hats," he said. "Well, I want the world to know that saddle shoes are in and that that hat bit never did hold any water."

For expert advice, the East Campus group called on Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin. Hardin promised the group National Right Guard protection if needed. He advised the group to farm out their resources carefully.

East Campus representatives said they will remain in their barricade until they are promised equality with the city campus. They noted the city campus will be sorry when the buses have no where to go and students will have to look at barbed wire on their way to get pizza.

The lovely trees and beautiful library of East Campus will be off limits to all city campus students along with the fragrant cow barns and scenic hog lots, noted on representative.

The East Campus Department of Information issued a statement noting that cows and pigs remained quiet in spite of the barricade building and student dissent.

"This tremendous opportunity for research on the nervous stability of cows is being carefully studied," the release said.

Meanwhile, things on city campus remained peaceful. When asked to comment on the East Campus situation, one city campus student said, "what campus?"

At latest word, the East Campus barricaders are still waiting for someone to attempt to run the barricade. The only reported incident occurred when one bull tried to leap the barbed wire to freedom.

The bull was rushed to a veterinarian where he is reported doing well-done.

On militant East Campus leader reported that if someone does not storm the campus soon, the barricade might collapse from lack of interest.

"The city campus is ignoring us again," he stormed. "They won't even rush our barricades."

Pedersen plucks red bippy

Laurel, Neb., whiz-kid Jim Pedersen was tickled Saturday as a new member of the Innocents Society.

The tall, nordic-looking Swede (who often disguised himself as a blonde toad) was best known and loved by the Daily Nebraskan as the editor who occasionally stepped into his purple office (didn't know he painted it did you, Al?)

Pedersen, whose high school prom picture is seen to the right, was truly deserving of this outstanding honor. He was not only editor of the Rag, president of PGD, but also winner of the Burt County Hog-Calling and Corn Shucking Contest. Further, he was recently elected regional president of the Prevent Male Sterility League.

"Pete" as his friends (both of them) called him, was one of 15 Innocents tackled.

The other 14 were nice guys, but as Pete said:

"They are fortunate to have me among them."

Bev Taylor
The others are: Ken Wald, president; John Rosenow, v.p.; Jim Smith, secy.; Wally (JD) Dean, treasurer; Jim Schaefer, Sgt.-at-Arms; Chris Ballant; Paul (IFC) Crist; Andy Cunningham; John Decker; Charles Havlicek; Horace Levy; Tom (yes, another) Lonnquist; Bob Pfeiffer and Norm Thorson.

Motorboats tapped: Julie Marlof, president; Bilsy Brownie, vp; Janet L. Maxwell (the Rag sweethearts), secretary; Anne Triba, treasurer; Marlene Beck, historian; Sheryl Ann Ankerstar; Denise Abrams; Kristi Chappelle; Margaret S. Crandell; Beckie L. Gloor; Veronic A. Haggart; Kathleen J. Knoell; Kathleen A. Kokes (Kokes the Real Thing); Teena Kudlacek; Elisabeth Lueder; Joyce Nelson; Patricia Tisdale; Vicki Van Steenberg; Rita, Marie Watson; Deborah Way; Beverly Jo White; and Janet L. Williams.

Up from the grave?

The rumor that AWS has been reincarnated is not, (emphatically repeating) not true according to Conny Fairy, the only one in the group who would talk.

Rumors that AWS had come back from the dead have been circulating throughout the campus this week. Many students have hinted that the organization already came back this week, in the form of a bull. Many of these same students said that this form was symbolic.

Miss Fairy, however negated the reports by saying, "If it came back as anything, it would be a worm."

Glorb hits campaign trail

A new campus organization, Radicals for Cyrus Glorb has been initiating a campaign to get their leader "Dear Cyrus", as they call him, elected.

When Mr. Glorb was questioned as to what the University students would be doing in his campaign he answered "What Students?"; that is, "What University?" better yet, "What campaign?"

According to campaign manager Blo Zonehorn, Glorb is in favor male chauvinism, Draft laws, and Segregation.

Guilties to trip new members

The Guilties, mens' senior dishonorary, will meet 3:30 p.m. Friday at Casey's, according to T. E. Iceburg, president.

Iceburg said the group is looking for 13 members to succeed them, to replace the members who will graduate or flunk out of school for holding down too many activities.

"We may have a token 'mediocre' this year," he said, and hinted that they may trip Bohemian-American Roman Huska, a national figure.

Iceburg said the group tries to remain as silent as possible on campus. "Also, the names have been changed to protect the Innocents," he added.

Pub board interviews

Interviews will be held Thursday, May 7 to fill three positions on the University Publications Board for next year.

The Board will meet and choose one junior for a one year term, one sophomore for a two year term and one freshman for a three year term.
