

Committee suggests changes

The Academic Planning Committee, as requested by the Faculty Senate meeting May 12, has been considering suggestions for reforming the University.

An information statement on the Committee's May 13 open hearings was adopted without opposition at the Faculty Senate meeting Thursday.

One of the recommendations of the Committee is the adoption, in each department, of a university-wide course number at the 100 level for variable credit. It could be used in several ways to overcome the question of inflexibility. It could be used for many purposes.

Another recommendation was that communication between the faculty of the various departments and the students be greatly increased. Several specific proposals were offered.

Another recommendation is that at either weekly or some other periodic interval, a two-hour period in late afternoon without formal class commitments be created so that special speakers and programs could be featured.

In conclusion, the Committee said that a combined Faculty Senate-ASUN examination "of the student-faculty interface with respect to University governance" should be undertaken.

A student-faculty representative senate, joint ASUN and Faculty Senate committees, or changes in the composition of the present Faculty Senate would be desirable, the committee suggested.
