

Rush Week called 'successful'

Rush Week activities were termed "exceedingly successful" by both Mrs. Jayne Anderson, Panhellenic adviser and Wally Dean, Interfraternity Council treasurer.

Of 513 prospects registered for the sorority rush program, 410 pledged. And of these, 360 received their first choice, according to the Panhellenic office.

Fraternalties engaged in "wildcat" rush this summer, a system dependent on personal contact between rushees, rush chairmen, and house members during the summer. Fraternalties pledged 285 men in the summer rush, and 283 during formal rush week activities.

MRS. ANDERSON remarked the numbers involved in sorority rush were in keeping with the last three years.

Dean said fraternities took 104 more men this year than last. This increase was due to the new program, he added.

"Rush week is a long way from the perfect system and through "wildcat" rush we tried to force houses to contact those who normally wouldn't go through rush," Dean added. "The new system also doesn't force blacks to go through formal rush."

Dean said he knew of a number of fraternities that made sincere efforts to contact minority students. Figures on the number of minority students pledging were not available.

OPPOSITION TO RUSH week activities was voiced in a letter addressed to the rushees which contained "questions and tatements highly critical of the Greek system at the University," said Dean. The letter was read to the fraternity rushees by IFC officials.

They were "underwhelmed and showed ni discernable reaction," according to Dean.

"As far as causing any problem, I have to say that it didn't," remarked Mrs. Anderson.

SORORITY RUSH was conducted in the same manner as last year, but the male and female rushees were housed in adjoining dorms and took their meals together this year, rather than being separated as in other years. Dean commented that this rush week seemed "a lot quieter and less confused."

"I think the future trend will be more towards all wildcat rush and away from rush week," Dean added.

Mrs. Anderson said, "most of the girls I have talked with really enjoyed rush week and even some who chose not to pledge thought that it had gone well."

'Frustration oasis' beats blahs

The University Counseling Center had the right remedy for students suffering from the "registration blahs" last week.

The Counseling Center offered Alka-Seltzer and candy at their "frustration oasis" counter to students who finished the long lines and red tape of registration. The Counseling Center also bestowed upon students a B.S. Degree in Registration that cited the student for displaying "tolerance for ambiguity and red tape, together with grea personal stamina."

The "frustration oasis" was a promotion to advertise the fact that the Counseling Center will be moving soon from their over-crowded offices in the Administration Building to Seaton Hall.

Debate meeting

The first meeting of students interested in intercollegiate debate is scheduled to be held Thursday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in Burnett Hall 105.

This activity is open to all students regardless of their major field, according to debate squad organizers. Previous experience is unnecessary.

Delay over! ASUN 'disk' shop opens next week

Despite a year's delay and change of command, the ASUN record shop will open next week in room 116 Nebraska Union.

Bill Chaloupka, who took over as project chairman last summer, said the opening delap was due to remodeling and difficulties with selecting a distributor.

ASUN finally decided to work with an independent distributor instead of with the National Student Association as the previous chairman had intended, Chaloupka said.

Chartered as a non-profit corporation, Chaloupka said the shop is "not trying to make money but provide service." Records will be sold to students at lower-than-store prices.

The difference between the record cost to the shop and to students will be spent on advertising and staff salaries Chaloupka said. All staff positions have been filled he said.
