

SANDBOX 29: Principles in Sand. An advanced course in construction and foundations. Continuation of Sandbox 28: Kindergarten Construction. Prerequisites: freshman standing and instructor disapproval.

Rhodes scholar here to discuss school reform

Individuals and organizations involved in planning educational reform will consult this week with Ira Magaziner, Rhodes scholar from Oxford and past student body president of Brown University.

His campus stay is being sponsored by the ASUN Education Committee and the Teaching Council, according to ASUN president Steve Tiwald. In addition to his sponsors, Magaziner will talk with the Academic Planning Committee and the Arts and Sciences Advisory Board.

While at Brown he was active in educational reform activities.

Big 8 Pizza King

Pizza • Roast Beef • Yum Yum • Submarine

Will deliver to parties

13th & Q

477-6254

Monthly parking available — Inquire for rates

New campus ministers discuss churches' role

"Christians must not be just good samaritans, but must also look for the causes that throw men into ditches along the road," says Rev. Lawrence Doerr, the new coordinator of United Ministries of Higher Education (UMHE).

Doerr and the Rev. Leonard Kalin, of the Newman Catholic Center, are new ministers on the University campus this fall.

Doerr comes to Lincoln from the University of Minnesota where he spent eight years as a campus minister and 2 years doing doctoral research. He received his undergraduate degree from Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn. and his bachelor of divinity from Union Theological Seminary in New York.

At the University of Nebraska he finds a "... spirit of openness to change..." which he feels is lacking in an urbanized university like Minnesota or an university with a history of internal disorder like Wisconsin.

Doerr believes his job is to "... deal with the agonies, fears and hopes of students and faculty as they look at the world and academic life." The Christian faith is not an island. It must operate within the context of the community, he continued. UMHE is a place for people who are seeking individual life-styles to come in and look for help in making their choices.

Kalin takes over a job formerly held by two priests. This reduction is a reflection of the shortage of priests in the Lincoln diocese. Kalin is also vocation director of the diocese and edits the Southern Nebraska Register, a Catholic publication.

Kalin received his undergraduate degree from the University of Nebraska and was ordained at St. Thomas Seminary in Denver.

Kalin said he was frustrated by the race situation. "Christianity is still a bit two-faced... Christianity means treating everyone as a human being."

Kalin said he believes some radical priests are serving their own causes rather than the Church's. "A priest shouldn't use the pulpit to express personal views. He should only speak to moral issues on which the Church has a definite stand."

Newman Center is "... a church away from home. We help students face the foreign nature of a large university campus."

Calendar

Wednesday, Sept. 16

Tryouts for "Julius Caesar" 7-10 p.m., Temple Building.

Art Exhibition: Drawings and paintings by David Amland, Elder Gallery, Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Student Print Show — Nebraska Union Gallery.

Sculpture Exhibition: American Sculpture Exhibition — Sheldon Gallery.

For Your Convenience
Shop Tonight And Thursday Night Until 9:00 p.m. For:

- ★ NEW AND USED TEXTS
- ★ OUTLINES
- ★ COMPLETE LINE OF PAPERBACKS AND BEST SELLERS
- ★ SUPPLIES

—Art

—Engineering

—General

Shop now while what you need is still in stock. Don't wait!

NEBRASKA BOOK STORE

1135 R St.