

Tuition statements

Because of a large number of late registrations at the University of Nebraska this fall, tuition statements will not be mailed until Sept. 28. The deadline for payment is being extended to 4 p.m. Oct. 6. The previous deadline for tuition payment was Oct. 2.

Tuition statements are mailed to the Lincoln or commuting address of each student. Any student who does not receive a tuition statement by Oct. 1, should report to the Bursar's Office, room 204, Administration Building.

If tuition payment is not received in the Bursar's Office by 4 p.m. Oct. 6, a $10 service charge will be added.

When tuition payment is made by mail, the student should allow at least three days for the envelope to reach the Bursar's Office. Additional time should be allowed for out-of-town or out-of-state mailing.

Six-man group debates sanction evidence has been accumulated," he continued. "The report doesn't describe the specific behavior of Rozman that was considered inappropriate."

Dewey said he would not comment on specific questions about the appropriateness of Rozman's behavior.

Nor would he comment directly when asked if statements by University officials tended to pass judgment on Rozman.

The Regents, in their directive, asked: "What sanctions should be imposed?"

Soshnik, in a letter to Dewey, said: "The justification for the Commission's finding (that Rozman's conduct was highly inappropriate) is presented . . . in the report."

Chancellor D. B. Varner has said in a recent interview: "Rozman's actions were questionable at best. The Regents action was proper."

Whether those statements passed judgment on the case is a "delicate question," Dewey said. Our committee has raised that question."

Dewey pointed out that the Rozman case has caused confusion for the Academic Privilege and Tenure Committee.

"We have been inactive for years," he said. "But late last spring, a policy statement on faculty responsibility and duties sifted its way to the Academic Privilege and Tenure Committee."

ASUN oks letter to Nixon

A letter suggesting that President Richard M. Nixon avoid military action in the Jordanian crisis was approved Wednesday by the ASUN Senate.

"We feel that U.S. military intervention, on any ground, would result in repercussions within our country which would make the reaction to the Cambodian invasion pale by comparison," the letter said.

The letter's author, ASUN senator Bill Arfmann, remarked, "I see no need for any further polarization or bloodshed at this point. It is a moral wrong that we as a nation should involve ourselves in such a civil war."

The communication, which is to be sent to Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird and the Nebraska Congressional delegation, as well as Nixon, urges the use of all possible diplomatic channels in the effort to save the lives of the 390 Americans now trapped in Jordan.

The letter was passed by a vote of 25 to 1, with senator Bruce Wimmer casting the only negative vote.

A "smorgasbord of topics" was announced for the Time Out Conference scheduled for October 16-17, by NSA Coordinator Terry Uland. Nationally known speakers will discuss topics on education, student legal rights, ecology, sexism and racism.

"The conference will be organized much like previous years, the only differences being rescheduling to a weekend date in order to alleviate class conflicts," Uland said. "The conference will concentrate on local issues," he added.

ASUN Second Vice President John Humlicek was sworn in Wednesday, with the words of his statement still ringing in the ears of his compatriots. "Perhaps if we kick some ass, things will move." Best of luck in your upcoming athletics, John.
