

Reconciliation is goal of AAUP in Davis case

The University chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) will try to reconcile the dispute between Michael Davis and the University Board of Regents.

The local chapter will be looking for grounds for conciliation in the forthcoming Faculty Liaison Committee report on the Davis case, according to Jerry Petr, vice president of the local AAUP chapter. Petr said the AAUP officers intend to rely heavily on the Liaison Committee report.

Davis, graduate student at the University of Michigan, submitted a complaint to the AAUP after the Board of Regents rejected his appointment as an philosophy instructor.

"If reconciliation is not possible and questions remain about the propriety of the Board of Regents action concerning Davis, the national office of AAUP would be the proper agency to conduct any requested investigation," according to a statement by the officers of the local chapter.

Petr said the local chapter "wouldn't take a position" if the national office enters the case in order not to prejudice the investigation.

Davis has the option to file a formal complaint with the national office, Petr noted.

The Liaison Committee will hold an open meeting at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Nebraska Union to discuss the Davis case. The Liaison Committee's report will be presented formally to the faculty at a meeting of the University Senate Oct. 13.

NFU begins with large wine-making enrollment

ASUN's Free University begins classes this week after a 3-day registration period notably lacking in red tape.

Steve Fowler, Free U committee chairman, said he is satisfied with registration and how it was handled.

On the basis of their signatures, approximately 1,000 students will be attending classes. The largest percentage is in the wine-making class.

Except for sections of the Educational Reform class, no courses had to be dropped for lack of interest, Fowler said.

Of the 45 classes offered, only 3 have less than 5 students enrolled up. Most classes have between 5-25 students now, but interest generally falls off around Christmas time and as other course's pressures mount, he added.

Fowler said that there will probably not be another registration period during the semester. Students wishing to join can just go to classes.

Free U instructors are about evenly divided between students and NU faculty, with a few from off-campus, Fowler said. Course leaders, especially for guitar classes, are still needed and can pick up information in the ASUN office in the Union.

Lottery 190 may fill quota

Nebraska may be able to fill its draft quota for the remainder of the year without going over lottery number 190, according to State Selective Service Director Col. Lee Liggett.

Liggett explained local draft boards can go as high as 195 for the October call but Nebraska has had no trouble supplying men and there is a strong possibility that 195 will not be reached by the end of December.

Meanwhile, national Selective Service Director Curtis W. Tarr announced in Washington that draft registrants whose lottery numbers are reached this year but who are not inducted will be placed at the top of the call-up list for only the first three months of 1971.

He said in a statement that he was taking the action in an effort to assure that registrants were not subjected to either more or less than 12 months of prime draft eligibility.

The Selective Service expects that this group will be inducted early in 1971, Tarr said.

Nebraska's director said the lottery system in general is working very well.

"I believe it is basically very acceptable to the American people," said Liggett. "I see no big changes that will be made in the immediate future, but possibly there will be some refinements."

While student draft deferments are being criticized by some as a way for the wealthy to avoid military service, the state director said he has "mixed feelings" on the subject.

"But the idea of the lottery system is to enlarge the available pool of men so you don't pick on any general segment of society. If student deferments are keeping this from happening then, yes, I believe they should be abolished," he said.

Liggett pointed out that Nebraska's draft quotas for this year are running about half of last year's total. For example, Nebraska supplied 213 men in January of 1969 and 104 in January of 1970, 203 men in June of 1969 and 102 in June of 1970, and 264 men in September of 1969 and 107 in September of 1970.

However, he stressed that monthly calls can fluctuate greatly depending on many factors, and the current trend could change quickly.
