

You can't rollerskate in the Buffalo herd

Colorado was a team picked by many to be the best in the Big Eight this year. But the Buffs have lost three of their first four conference dates.

It hasn't been injuries which have plagued the Buffaloes. So where does the problem lie?

"Colorado has just made too many mistakes and given away the ball too many times," explained Nebraska coach Bob Devaney of Saturday's foe.

"They're still a good football team," offered Devaney. "It all depends on what their attitude is. If they want to play football, they're gonna be real tough."

And playing the fourth-ranked Huskers on regional TV should increase Colorado's desire to play a good game.

The Buffaloes rushing attack, 10th in the nation and tops in the conference with a 273.0 norm going into the Missouri game last week, produced only 35 net yards as Paul Arendt, playing at quarterback most of the way for the first time this season, went to the airways.

"Missouri defended Colorado very well," said Devaney. "I think Colorado just decided that they had to go to the air early."

The Buffaloes were forced to punt the first three times they had possession of the ball in the game.

Devaney looks for Buff coach Eddie Crowder to go with Jim Bratten, the second part of a one-two punch at quarterback, against the Huskers Saturday.

The 1:30 p.m. date in Boulder will be played on a real surface, only the Huskers second experience of the year on real grass. Devaney hoped to practice on grass in Lincoln this week, but wet grounds have forced further use of the AstroTurf.

"We hope to get on a real surface either Wednesday or Thursday," Devaney offered.

Nebraska once again survived the weekend with only limited injuries. Flanker Johnny Rodgers, who suffered a minor ankle sprain against Oklahoma State, is reported back in good condition.

Orduna near Devaney era rush mark

Joe Orduna, despite sharing I-back duties with Jeff Kinney, has a chance to become the leading ground gainer in the Bob Devaney era at Nebraska during the Colorado game Saturday.

Orduna leads the Huskers in rushing this season with 536 yards and has a career total of 1,670 yards. That's only 66 yards shy of Harry Wilson's total which is tops in the Devaney era.

Bobby Reynolds, who starred from 1950-52, is the all-time Nebraska leader in rushing with 2,196 yards. Orduna is the leading rusher for the all-time Nebraska freshman teams with 389 yards.

Together Kinney and Orduna have gained nearly 1,000 yards on the ground this season. Kinney has contributed 439 yards to the Husker rushing attack.

Intramurals call basketball meet

Entry forms for intramural basketball teams are due Friday in room 121W Nebraska Hall.

There will be a managers meeting for all intramural basketball teams Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union. Teams who fail to send a manager or representative to the meeting will not be allowed to participate in the intramural basketball program.
