ASUN courts Easterners

East Campus students got in on the action as ASUN held its regular Wednesday session in the East Campus Union.

Earlier in the year ASUN decided to hold a few meetings on East Campus to give students there a chance to participate. Five or six took the opportunity (more than usually attend meetings on city campus).

East Campus senator Lynn Holden satirically noted the condition and extent of East Union facilities and suggested the senators keep them in mind when the issue of remodeling is raised.

Holden then invited one of the spectators to give a view on the PACE proposal. Larry Cooper, who said he probably represented the opinion of most East Campus students, conceded that low-income and minority students need help.

However, he said, most East Campus students thought the aid shouldn't be given as a gift but as a loan. Noting bad experiences the country has suffered in giving money to organizations like the United Nations and foreign aid, Cooper stated that a loan system would prevent students from "getting something for nothing."

In further business Steve Fowler explained that his NFU committee has appropriated $100 for next weekend's human rights retreat. Last week the senate denied the Human Rights committee the money.

Fowler defended his decision on the grounds that the sensitivity training planned for the retreat is a legitimate NFU interest and the money is coming from a different budget. Besides, Fowler argued that the appropriation only lost by one vote last week.

Jim Gordon introduced an extensive resolution calling for a study of student elections and student sentiment on the NU campus. It also called for consideration of the possibility of a constitutional convention for ASUN during this school year.

After a spirited discussion the senate tabled the resolution for consideration next week.

The meeting ended with the announcement of a vacancy in the Teacher's College senate post and a reminder that there will be no senate meeting next week due to Thanksgiving Vacation.

After the meeting concluded some of the students who had watched the proceedings explained their reasons for coming. Most said they were interested in what's going on around campus and wanted to take this opportunity to see how things were run. One freshman said he had noticed that "things seemed separate" between East and city campuses. This meeting seemed a chance to bring the two closer together and he added that he would attend ASUN in the future.

RHA plans open house reform

The Housing Policy Committee voted Wednesday to discontinue the experimental open lounge program and attempt to combine the University's three visitation programs.

The present Residence Hall Association (RHA) hours, open house and open lounge programs have caused "great difficulty for the residence hall staffs in the professional administration of the three programs," Ely Meyerson, director of the Housing Office, said.

In a policy statement, Meyerson continued that "students find it relatively simple to distort the intent and spirit of the activities."

Barry Pilger, president of the Housing Policy Committee, said, "Residents in the halls are extremely confused over what policy should be used at what times."

To combine the three policies, Pilger appointed an ad hoc committee with representatives from ASUN, the Residence Hall Association, the Inter-Fraternity Council, Panhellenic, the Inter-Coop Association and the Housing Policy Committee.

A report will be presented at the second weekly meeting of the committee after Thanksgiving.

Pilger said he hopes the committee will present "a more liberal, general policy within which the fraternities, sororities, co-ops and residence halls can determine their own policy concerning guests and visiting regulations."

An ad hoc committee to evaluate the open lounge policy recommended, in their report, continuation of the open lounge until a new policy is formulated. Housing Policy Committee members failed to see the necessity of establishing this program for a temporary period.
