

"The Shadow" returns

Man about town Lamonte Cranston once again battles sinister villains and unravels mysteries in KRNU's rebroadcasts of original programs of "The Shadow."

Originally published in a monthly magazine titled "Amazing Stories," The Shadow went on network radio in 1936 and remained for over 12 years. It was among the first network mystery radio series and one of the most popular.

"The Shadow" was a double character. In everyday life he was Lamonte Cranston, a gentleman about town. But when crime threatened or mystery called he assumed the clothes and presence of the "The Shadow!"

Sunday afternoon listeners of days past thrilled to four different "Shadows" over the years. First came Arthur Vinton, then Orson Welles, Bill Johnstone and finally Bret Morrison. Everett Sloan and Agnes Morehead were regulars of the early cast who went on to acting fame.

The show had extremely high ratings in its day. Entertainers and comedians worked it into their acts. The phrase "The Shadow Knows" became a common slang term on the order of "would you believe."

The old broadcasts will be presented on KRNU-FM radio in a thirteen week series. The series began November 23 at 10 pm.

KRNU program director Peter Mayeux said the programs are being run in their original form except that commercials are deleted.

Students can buy ponchos, pottery, embroidered Christmas cards and pillow covers, straw animals and alpaca yarn straight from Latin America in the Nebraska Union through Friday.

The handwork is made by children aged 6 to 16 from Peru, Ecuador, Costa Rica and other Latin American countries. Project Endeavor, a non-profit assistance program, handles importing and marketing the goods in the U.S. for the needy artisan cooperatives involved.

Tutors of Nebraska Indian Children is sponsoring the NU sale. The group's profits will be used in its work with Winnebago Indian children.

All other profits go to the participating South and Latin American cooperatives.

East Pakistan needs help

University of Nebraska Pakistani students are making an appeal on campus to raise money for relief of victims of the tidal wave and cyclone that struck East Pakistan last month.

Some 300,000 people were killed in the disaster and it has been estimated that a half million more will die if relief does not reach them in time.

Contributions to the relief fund may be made at a booth in the Union north lobby or checks and money orders payable to "East Pakistan Cyclone Relief Fund" may be mailed to Dr. Stanley D. Luke, Dept. of Mathematics, Nebraska Wesleyan University.
