

Publicity stunt of the week

All you have to do to get some attention is do something just a little unusual, according to a Free Speech Movement (FSM) member. And that's exactly what FSM got Monday — a little attention.

FSM's Peace Committee held their regular afternoon meeting in the ROTC building and got attention, mostly from the Campus Police.

About a dozen people entered the building in a group at approximately 4 p.m. They sat in the hall and discussed details of an upcoming dance planned for the Nebraska Union.

An Army officer listened for a few moments and invited the group to meet in a classroom. According to Mike Barret of FSM, the officer told them to call if they ever wanted to use the room again.

A few campus policemen arrived shortly after the group entered the classroom. Witnesses said the police suggested that the group follow "normal procedures" to arrange meetings in the future. Police took photographs of the participants but neither they or ROTC officials tried to stop the meeting.

Dean for Student Development Russel Brown, Peter Wirtz of Student Affairs and ASUN President Steve Tiwald all came to the ROTC building when they heard of the meeting. None of them made any statements to the Peace Committee.

The Committee talked about the dance and, according to participant Ron Kurtenbach, some "larger issues." Barret invited ROTC officials and police to sit in on the meetings and added that the FSM would be happy to provide snapshots so the Campus Police wouldn't have to take pictures.

Professor of Military Science Col. William Gist, who was away at a conference when the FSM arrived, said he had no objections to the meeting. "We're for peace, too," he noted.

Gist said he took advantage of the meeting by giving the FSM people literature and inviting them to join the ROTC program.

'Up and At 'Em' Peace Festival in the planning

Nebraskans for Peace are planning an "Up and At 'Em" Peace Festival Jan. 9.

Mike Barrett of the peace group said Sunday that the event will focus on American politics and culture. The festival may include speakers, a film and the band "Up".

This group, the band of the Youth International Party of the Black Panthers, performs songs about politics and culture.

"It's a very political band," Barrett said.

Nebraskans for Peace are trying to bring Dave Sinclair, the brother of the organizer of the White Panthers, to the festival to speak. The film, "Eldridge Cleaver", is also being sought for the event.

Soap clogs, doesn't bubble

The jets of water from the Broyhill Fountain have gurgled down to a listless squirt twice since the Nov. 14 dedication.

Both times gummy residue from soap clogged the strainer so that the pump was unable to draw water. The anti-foaming agent in the water prevented the expected deluge of suds, but the fountain still had to be dismantled and cleaned.

These two incidents, plus a light fixture apparently broken by a thrown rake handle, cost the university about $250, according to George Krauss, assistant to the physical plant administrator.

A conviction of causing more than $100 damage under the malicious destruction of property law can also mean a fine up to $1,000.

If the damage is under $100, the act is a misdemeanor, with a fine upon conviction of at least $100 and up to $500, or a sentence of up to six months in county jail.

No leads have turned up in the investigation of the damage, Gail Gade, chief of campus security, said Tuesday.

Overlapping Solitaires

are the new trend in engagement rings - and a very effective one. Designed so that they embrace the wedding band to give a total look so much in vogue, they look as one ring - are delightfully different.
