

KRNU presents ecology series

A 10-part series focusing on Nebraska's environmental problems is being presented by the University radio station, KRNU. "Ecology-Man's Fight for Survival," includes ten 15 minute broadcasts beginning at 7 p.m. Feb. 1-5 and 8-12. Each program will be concerned with a particular area of the ecology crisis.

Prepared by an advanced reporting class in the School of Journalism, the program is primarily serving as in-depth project for the students. However, the co-ordinator of the program, Peter Mayeux assistant professor of journalism explained. "We felt it was an important subject for all Nebraskans. The program may help more Nebraskans to become individually involved with the problem."

Contributors to the program include UN Secretary-General U Thant, State Senator Terry Carpenter, Governor J. J. Exon, former Governor Norbert T. Tiemann, and environmentalist Barry Commoner.

will probably have to review our plans."

The home economics building, which Raun and Varner both said was badly needed, was nevertheless tenth on the priority list. Since the land acquisition and library were the only other projects to receive appropriation proposals, at least seven other items were ignored.

Included in the budget proposal for the first time was a $2 million allocation to a Regents' discretionary fund. Faun said he was unsure as to where the money would be applied.

Apparent in the Exon proposal is an emphasis on better education and more spending at UN-O and the state colleges. UN-O, for instance, received a proposal for a $4.5 million total increase while Lincoln and out-state totals registered a 500,000 reduction.

Raun, however, said he couldn't see if there was any emphasis on one institution at the expense of the other.

"When your budget is cut," he said, "it is difficult to see that there is any emphasis at all."

Both Varner and Raun indicated the budget would need to be carefully analyzed before it could be determined what steps would have to be taken.

Raun summed up his reaction in this manner: "The challenge we face because of the budget staggers me at this point. Any adjustment we make will have a tremendous impact on the University. I don't know exactly what we will do about it, but it will be drastically different than what he had planned."
