

the lowlands reader...

aw

through the window

small sunlight ray passes through the window, drawing a paned prison setting on the wall, too bad the sun doesn't come in more than one color, maybe	we should paint the window, don't stick your head out the wall, the sun is not changing colors, only the rainbow is passing by.
---	---

by Kathy Cain

photo by Mike Hayman

Ask me about...

Ask me about faith,
I plead mostly agnostic.
My eyes sense a flame of searing fire,
scorching yesterday's broken toy of a heart.
While touching upon tomorrows song
I imagine an unknown prayer.
Disgusted, I urge myself even faster:
hoping for upstart days.
Maybe someday I'll slide down by the knife,
and gather myself unbleeding.

by Bob Clemmer

on the floating docks...

on the floating docks
the ships lay:
steel and engines depend
on the wooden pier
and fibre ropes laugh with me—
I feel the water near;
storms of fear
and worried calms
that fill the sailors' year
on the surface sea
cold hands clutching lines
that bind us
mind us
find us mornings still in the mornings chill we
the sea and I,
can feel the power
and know the calm
nations pure cookies
time is tea

by Scott McLaughlin

Attention!

We call your attention to the listing of your courses on the Registration Form. Please Note: The legend above the course listings does not correspond to the computer printed information below. Note the following differences:

Under DEPARTMENT . . . The computer print out is the Call Number and the Department Name.
Under TIME . . . . . The computer print out under "Begin" time is the Section Number. The computer print out under "End" time is the Beginning Time.
Under SECTION NUMBER . . . . . The computer print out is the Ending Time.

by Doug Lowe