both professors of educational administration, Hubbard's attorneys state: "Our position in this matter has not been refusal to meet and discuss Dr. Hubbard's employment situation, but a position to find a meaningful forum where Dr. Hubbard's rights can be protected."

THEY ALSO NOTE that Hubbard has not received a written list of charges or considerations.

Hubbard was notified by a letter December 14 that he might not be rehired for the 1971-72 academic year. At a January meeting with Howard Eckel, professor of educational administration, and Hubbard, Hayes verbally enumerated the reasons for Hubbard's possible non-reappointment.

Later in January, Hubbard asked the Conciliation Committee to investigate these reasons. In February, the tenured professors of his department voted to recommend that Hubbard not be rehired.

"He feels that he was treated unjustly," Hayes said. "Apparently the rest of the department doesn't or it wouldn't have voted unanimously not to rehire him."

'Sandy' fund drive needs $8,300

'Sandy'

Unless students collect an additional $8,300 by June 1 "Sandy in Defined Space" will be traveling back to her home in New York.

Martha Haack, chairman of the student organization that is raising funds for "Sandy", said students will stage an all out fund drive later this spring.

Since October students have had art displays, art sales and outright soliciting of students and faculty in a futile attempt to raise the $12,000 needed to buy "Sandy." Reasons for the failure of the fund drive vary.

Students' lack of interest, lack of time to organize and a dislike of the statue are a few Haack mentioned.

She added that if it is impossible to raise enough money to buy "Sandy", another statue will be purchased or the money will be used to buy other sculptures for the Sheldon Sculpture Garden.

University instructors and students are selling art work now at Sheldon Art Gallery and all money going to the fund for "Sandy".

ASUN votes for examination of student regent amendment

ASUN voted Wednesday to allow its legislative liaison committee to investigate the idea of having a student regent bill introduced in the Unicameral.

State Sen. Terry Carpenter promised to introduce such a bill at a Cather Hall rap session Feb. 25.

The bill would call for a constitutional amendment permitting students to elect a voting student member to the Board of Regents.

LYNN WEBSTER, member of the legislative liaison committee, and freshman Jim Fullmer, who brought up the student regent idea at the Carpenter rap session, visited Carpenter Tuesday along with two University of Nebraska at Omaha students.

Webster reported Carpenter was still in favor of the idea, and would introduce anything students thought was "politically acceptable."

Meanwhile, University law student Lyle Koenig, who has had previous bill-drafting experience, is working on the bill.

WEBSTER SAID the major problem in drafting the bill would involve "technicalities" such as which campus in the University complex would supply the Regent. Also, some students could vote twice for membership on the Board - once at home and again on campus.

Webster expects the bill to be drafted in time for consideration at next Wednesday's ASUN meeting. Once approved there and by the other University and state college campuses the measure would go to Carpenter for review.

After a trip to the Legislature's bill drafter, the proposal would proceed on to the Reference Committee, which would probably refer it to Carpenter's Military and Government Committee.

Five signatures in Carpenter's committee would send it to the floor where 29 legislators would have to approve introduction of the proposal as a bill.

THIS LENGTHY PROCEDURE is required on all bills introduced after the first 20 days of the legislative session.

If 29 legislators voted to allow the bill's introduction, the bill would go back to the Reference Committee, back to Carpenter's committee, and back to the floor.

If passed, the proposed constitutional amendment would go to the polls for popular ratification.

Carpenter introduced Webster and the other students to Nebraska Attorney General Clarence Meyer during the Tuesday meeting. Webster said Meyer thought the proposal could work.

Carpenter emphasized that students would have to do most of the lobbying and testifying for the bill, Webster added.

K-State engineer speaks Thursday

The head of the department of applied mechanics at Kansas State University, Philip G. Kirmser, will conduct an engineering mechanics colloquium Thursday at the University of Nebraska.

Kirmser will speak on the nature of the matrix equation and its applications to beam gridwork and interpolation problems at 3:30 p.m. in Room 305 of Bancroft Hall.

KU is favored to win Big 8 swimming title

Kansas University will be seeking its fourth straight title as the Big Eight Swimming Championships get under way today at Norman, Okla.

Back to defend their individual titles will be 13 of 15 1970 gold medal winners, but they shouldn't have an easy time doing it. Only two have the conference's fastest time in their event heading into this weekend's activity.

Nebraska's best chance for an individual champion should be Dave Backer who leads the league's 100 yard freestylers with a 48.5 clocking, ranks second in the 200 and fifth in the 50 yard freestyle. He will have to defeat KU's Kim Bolton, a triple winner last year, who has posted a 48.6 this season. Bolton won the 50, 100, and 200 yard freestyle races at last year's conference meet.

NU's Dave Schmidt and Randy Stoike rank 2-3 on this year's pre-meet form chart in the 200 yard backstroke with times of 2:03.9 and 2:04.1. Scott Skultety of Kansas leads the event at 2:01.7.

Preliminaries are set for Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons with finals of each race scheduled for the evening at 8 p.m.
