East Campus hosts citizens' conference

Between 100 and 150 Nebraskans responded to Chancellor D. B. Varner's invitation to help evaluate and improve the College of Home Economics by attending a one-day conference on East one-day conference on East Campus Monday.

"We're extremely pleased with the response," said the college's dean, Virginia Trotter.

"We have representation from every part of the state. This means they're interested in what's going on at the University."

Varner sent a letter on March 3 to 200 alumni, students' parents, and other Nebraskans requesting "your counsel on how we can make this program more effective."

The University's "sole purpose is to provide the best educational programs and services to the people of this state" with the money available, the letter said.

In order to do this, the letter continued, it is necessary to "establish and maintain a better system of communications between the University and the leaders of this state."

The conference was held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

Listen for the sounds of love...

Where do you hear thom?

In a plea for help from someone who needs it? In a dialogue between stude.... and the Establishment? In a talk session for a marriage-on-the rocks? At a Catholic Mass conducted in an Episcopal Church?

You'd be surprised.

The sounds of love are everywhere — anyone can hear them. If they listen.

The Paulists listen. But, like everything in life, the things that matter most are the hardest.

It isn't easy being a Paulist. But then, the best things in Schmit advocated giving preference in admissions to students who are residents of Nebraska and who plan to stay in the state. He gave statistics showing one in three graduates stay in Nebraska.

Robert Prokop, NU Regent testifying against the bill, reminded the committee of the constitutional responsibilities of the Regents to handle matters of policy for the University. He added that a study is currently underway by the Regents to meet the problems of doctor retention and rural doctor shortages.

DALE MICHAELS, a second year medical student from Laurel, testified against the bill on behalf of the medical students who paced the hearing room. Michaels warned the committee of the possible dangers of creating an admissions board subject to political pressure.

Cecil Wittson, president of the College of Medicine, gave final testimony in which he blamed the inability of the Med School to provide internships and residency posts to graduating doctors as one of the primary reasons students leave Nebraska.

Wittson said the Med School only has 88 such posts and predicted about 300 were needed. He said four out of six doctors who do internships or residency requirements in Nebraska stay in the state.
