

Vote Rozman

Today is the last day of voting for the Outstanding Professor Award.

This special election sponsored by Builders awards the outstanding professor a cash prize of $500.

Of the three finalists, the Daily Nebraskan has chosen to support the most qualified, the most deserving professor. Need we say any more?

VOTE PROFESSOR ROZMAN. It's one way to show your concern for injustice.

In other matters of voting, there currently are three university students running for the Lincoln City Council.

Each of the student candidates has many original and positive ideas. All three candidates would be assets to the City of Lincoln, as well as to the University.

Consequently, each candidate is worthy of University community support, from students, faculty and administrators.

But to date none of the three have enough workers and supporters to win in the May 4 election. Why don't they? That's a good question, and perhaps if enough people asked it of themselves they would soon be working on at least one of the campaigns.

The University needs all the support it can get. When it doesn't have that support from public officials, it's easy to realize what can and does happen.

The university is vulnerable and needs representation at every level of government. Getting that representation is not easy. It takes time and money. The three student candidates offer that representation, as well as their time to work for you.

But they don't have enough money to buy the election. So they need help. If you like Lincoln and if you want to make it a better place to live, then give the candidates some help.

More on the budget

Dear editor,
Enclosed is a copy of the letter which I have sent to Gov. Exon concerning the University budget.

Dear Governor Exon,
The Nebraska Student Veterans Association represents student veterans' clubs at institutions of higher learning throughout Nebraska. Two of the member clubs, those at University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and University of Nebraska-Omaha are directly affected by the University of Nebraska budget.

As president of the Nebraska Student Veterans Association, I feel it is my duty to express the membership's deep concern over the budget recommendations. At a time when the academic excellence of many of the University's programs is in question, and at a time of inflationary cost rises, we cannot understand how the state can consider a 3.6% decrease in general fund support for the University for next year.

The Nebraska Student Veterans Association hereby respectfully requests that you reconsider your budget proposal for the University.

Sincerely yours,
Parker M. Brinson, President
N.S.V.A.

Backs Soshnik

Dear Editor:
Terry Cannon's statement of satisfaction over President

Soshnik's resignation because of his actions during last May's disturbances indicates the Mr. Cannon has not given much thought to what might happen in the forcible clearing of a building.

Undoubtedly it would have been legal for President Soshnik to have called in the police to have cleared the M&N Building at its closing time. If force had been necessary, a wrecked building would have resulted along with injuries of varying degrees to some of the policemen. This ignores the possibility of another Kent State but apparently Terry Cannon feels anything would have been justified to enforce the law against the misdemeanor of trespassing.

Yours truly,
Edward L. Dunlay

Rest in peace

Dear editor,
This letter is not so much in response, but more so in defense, of the letter of condemnation directed towards myself by John Hughes in Wednesday's Daily Nebraskan. I'd like to clarify a few of the points I stated in my letter last Monday, especially to Mr. Hughes.

First of all, Mr. Hughes, I declared in my letter that I really did NOT feel that laws change people's ways of thinking. I said that "laws would change the outward expression of ("or" was a misprint) the person's way of thinking," and I meant that the person would retain his beliefs, prejudices, etc., suppressed within his own mind by these laws. So I find we agree on this point, then, Mr. Hughes. I'm truly sorry to say that I'm not under twenty years of age, but how excellent of you to draw such a concrete analogy between drinking beer and Women's Liberation, though (and I'm joking, of course).

Sorry, Mr. Hughes, but I did not make the "pious statement" that "I am not a male chauvinist." I stated that "I do not CONSIDER myself a 'male chauvinist'" and to me there's a world of difference between these two statements.

As to my "idiotic suggestion" that a women's group or sorority retaliate by portraying men as sex objects, I implied that the reaction by the male and female, community of Lincoln, young and old, would be interesting, that's all.

My letter on Monday was not, I repeat, not in defense of the fraternity Delta Upsilon, or of any fraternity for that matter, Mr. Hughes. I am a member of a fraternity (not DU) but I do not consider myself an "enemy" to Women's Liberation for that reason, and I never said I was an "enemy." I also stated (maybe you forgot, Mr. Hughes?) that I agree ("agreed" was a misprint) with a lot of the positions held by women's lib.
