Peabody game...

Two groups marked their secret ballots in front of a member of the other group. But one of these groups in an attempt to outsmart the other, filled out two ballots and switched as it handed in its tally.

"Ideals are a great thing, but most people are not where they say they are," Peabody said. "When the heat goes on, you find out where you are."

But he warned, "In politics a reputation as a man who keeps his word is terribly important."

HE NOTED with regret the loss of credibility by many in politics. "If they're not believed, they've lost their power."

As the group entered round three, two groups had lost all points, two groups were tied for the lead and one group had dropped out.

Due to a fluke mistake in marking a ballot, group II earned the most points.

"People who win in politics are not necessarily the most brilliant," Peabody commented, "but those who make the fewest mistakes."

"Nothing says the most honest and brilliant people end up on the top. That's why we have so many idiots in government."
