

Off-campus students establish study group

After six months of preliminary planning, an organization to more fully integrate off-campus students into University life is underway.

With help from several other interested students, Unicorn University of Nebraska Independent Cornhuskers President Sally McGinty began investigating the problems of off-campus students last fall.

The group, with extensive assistance from Coordinator of Student Activities Peter Wirtz studied possible solutions to the problems and ways to implement them.

Out of these and other meetings the new Off-campus and Independent Student Advisory Council was formed. A statement of problems and plans was also drafted.

The statement outlines the unique problems faced by off-campus University students. Most relate to the social life of independents.

"Off-campus students aren't exposed to other students," McGinty said. "They miss activities because they aren't aware of the opportunities on campus."

Lincoln residents in particular, McGinty explained, tend to associate with friends from high school days and stay close to their home neighborhoods.

Plans have already been laid to meet part of the problem by arranging speaking engagements with Lincoln schools so that off-campus people can explain University life to high-schoolers and attempt to help them avoid common problems. The Council invites students to participate in the talks.

Another area the Council will work in is providing more facilities for commuters. These could include more office space for organizations, more vending machines and lounges, and solutions to what McGinty termed the "really desperate" problem of parking.

The Council also hopes to put out a booklet for off-campus students and possibly provide regular mailings or a newsletter to keep them informed throughout the year.

McGinty has been elected President of the new Council. Other members are Vice-President Bill Hermes, Secretary Kathy Johnson, Treasurer Allan Harkness, Jim Mallatt, Ed Risley, and Jan Williams.

Searchers hold session

The student members of the presidential search committee will hold an open hearing Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Nebraska Union to hear student ideas about job qualifications for a successor to Joseph Soshnik.

In addition, Wallace M. Rudolph, chairman of the search committee, has requested that names for a new president of the Lincoln campuses be submitted in writing to him, c/o Mrs. Maxine Keller, 305 Administration, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska 68508.

Rudolph, professor of Law, said that nominations concerning persons from other campuses should include sufficient information about the person so that the committee may adequately evaluate the nominee.
