assumes that there will somewhere be a demand for what you want to be," said Boohar, "but at a stable population you may want to be in a certain occupation and if it's full, there won't be any more demand, due to the stable population."

The two possible solutions are increased competition because the stable population will fail to provide expanded demand or some official agency to regulate occupations.

"One way or another, it's going to come about," said Boohar. "What it boils down to is this—there are no easy choices."

Crew. . . Novice oarsmen sometimes run into problems. In their first rowing practice, Nebraska's crew sometimes ran into poles.

Row, row, row your boat. . .

If an opposing crew team had witnessed Nebraska's first test in the water, it would have felt overconfident. One member of the Nebraska team fell in the water and the Nebraska shell hit a post shortly after the rowing had started.

Coach Bill Brush, a junior with previous rowing experience, scratched his head in disbelief while yelling instructions.

But it was a refreshing experience. In these days of all college sports getting big time, it was refreshing to see crew's amateur standing.

And the first Nebraska crew team in the University's history will make its debut Sunday at Branched Oak Lake near Malcolm, Washburn of Kansas, a school with also limited experience, will be the opponent.

Two races will be held, starting at 2 p.m. It is about a 20 minute drive to Branched Oak Lake from the Lincoln campus. A suggested route is to follow 10th Street north which leads into Highway 34. Signs will direct spectators to the rowing site just before reaching Malcolm.

Each race will be 2,000 meters which is approximately 1 1/4 miles.

Nebraska's rowing team has University sanction and support, but is not funded by the school. A constitution was written and accepted by the University of Nebraska Student Activities Office.

Coach Brush is optimistic about his team's first taste of competition Sunday.

"I look for a win this Sunday," said Brush. "Washburn is in about the same situation as we are and I think we have a good chance of winning."

Nebraska's team is inexperienced. But that's the idea. The team has 26 members which are all sophomores and freshmen.

Weed science research lab to be dedicated

The new weed science facility operated by the Agronomy Department will be dedicated Friday at 2:30 p.m.

The new facility makes it possible to conduct research on a 12 month basis to help solve some of the practical weed control problems encountered across the state.

Dedicatory remarks will be made by President Joseph Soshnik.

Principal speaker at the program will be former agronomy department staff member Dayton L. Klingman now involved in weed investigations for grazing lands, U.S. Department of Agriculture, in Maryland.
