by-laws, Fowler said. The subcommittee may move into areas not covered by existing policy, but the tendency of the group has been not to move very far from what has already been done, he added.

Academic Policy
Subcommittee Chairman James
A. Lake said his group had discussed a code of academic responsibility and freedom during its summer meetings.

He noted that there is nothing in the current by-laws about faculty responsibility and freedom. "Such a statement is needed," Lake said.

The law professor described what his subcommittee is doing as boiling down the Statement on Campus Disruptions into general by-law language.

ORIGINAL suggestions have already been revised several times, he said, and he expected several more revisions to come. Lake added that even seemingly simple points raise many new questions.

"When you're concerned with language, haste can make great waste," Lake said. He added that he didn't know when his group would finish its job.

Lake's subcommittee will also consider matters of tenure and retirement age for university personnel. Other sections of the current by-laws such as how and when salaries are paid don't require much revision, he said.

ALAN T. SEAGREN,
Administrative Policy
Subcommittee chairman, said his committee has dealt with three by-law chapters of
administrative policy.

The first chapter deals with powers, duties, responsibilities and officers of the Board of Regents. It also sets the place and number of Regents meetings and requirements for appearing before the Board.
The document also establishes a code of ethics for board members, he said.

Seagren, Director of Summer Sessions and assistant dean of Teachers College, Lincoln, said he would not discuss the specifics of the report until it has been reviewed by the committee as a whole.

CHAPTER TWO deals with the administrative system on a university level, Seagren said.
Considering the president, vice-president and other university-wide officials, the report outlines functions, powers and selection procedures.

On the campus level the report considers chancellors, vice-chancellors and other campus administrators. The report establishes positions for administration of student affairs, personnel and operations and maintenance, but does not provide for specific jobs, Seagren said.

This section also considers the college level administration of deans and department heads. One section of the chapter contains "descriptive material" of how the powers of some faculty and student groups are related to the Board, Seagren said.

CHAPTER THREE of the draft considers terms and conditions of university employment, he said. So far, the committee has written a section on categories of personnel and plans to deal with terms of contract, Seagren added.

He said that a business and financial section has been drafted but not submitted to the subcommittee. It deals with purchasing, claims, university property, contracts and other legal operating matters.

Seagren estimated that his subcommittee would have a draft ready for the total committee in a month and a half.
