

Husker line-up sees few changes

by Jim Johnston

Doug Jamail is the chatter man for the Nebraska Cornhuskers. He's the type of player that gets "fired up" for calisthenics.

But Jamail hasn't had much more than calisthenics to get excited about during his varsity career. Jamail, a center, had the misfortune of attending Nebraska the same time as Doug Dumler and has been playing second best since the two started their varsity careers in 1970.

Saturday against Minnesota, however, Jamail can look beyond warm-ups. He's the probable starting center against the Gophers because Dumler's foot hasn't recovered from an injury sustained against Oregon.

And now you should hear Jamail chatter.

"It's a different deal being a starter," admitted Jamail. "I didn't realize how much more work and time it involves. You have to look at more films and really study the man who will be across from you."

Jamail's difficulty in adjusting to a starting job goes beyond pre-game preparation.

"The battle was already over when I went into games last year," said Jamail. "I have to get used to the idea that the man across from me will be just as fresh as I am."

Jamail, who claims to be a member of the All-Armenian football team, is the smallest center on the Nebraska squad. He weighs just 204 and stands only 5-11. Minnesota middle guard Clayton Scheuer, who will be opposing Jamail Saturday, will have a 50-pound advantage.

"Those big guys don't really scare me," said Jamail. "I played against that guy at Minnesota last year and was able to handle him. I feel I'm quicker than he is and I'll get a lot of help from our guards."

Jamail...the chatter man

The Bellaire, Tex., native is looking forward to his first starting job.

"I naturally feel a little extra pressure," said Jamail. "And Dumler's a tough person to try and follow, but I'm not too worried about making mistakes. No team is better than its weakest player and I think that's what gives us a chance to win the big one again this year."

Dumler, who head coach Bob Devaney says would have to make a big improvement on his foot before being ready for Saturday, isn't the only Cornhusker doubtful.

Linebacker Bill Sloev appears out of the picture for Saturday and Jerry List although improving is still considered a doubtful. Sloev injured his knee against Oregon and List sustained bruised ribs.

Jim Branch, a 203-pounder from Chicago, will take Sloev's place and Bruce Hauge is also available. If List is unable to play, he'll be spelled by sophomore Brent Longwell from Homer who caught two passes for 19 yards against the Ducks.

Devaney indicated that Bill Olds and Maury Damkroger are battling for the starting fullback job, and Olds appears to still have the edge.

Devaney said there would probably be no other changes from last week for the Minnesota game.

CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN POETRY LEADER: BART BECKER

The University of Nebraska doesn't offer, at present, a literature course that covers the contemporary American poets. As a consequence the students education is even further shackled. The course will examine the poetry that is being written today in America. A good book, one which I will rely on quite heavily, is THE CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN POETS: AMERICAN POETRY SINCE 1940, edited by Mark Stevens. There are plenty of other sources. FIRST MEETING: Wednesday, September 22, 7:00 p.m. WHERE: University Tennis Courts, whichever open.

FOOD COOPERATIVE LEADER: DENNIS BERKHEIM

The purpose of this "course" is to get all university students and people in their communities to set up food cooperatives. Everyone will learn how to run all aspects of the food cooperative and we will start out the course by getting as many people as possible interested in saving up to 50% on weekly groceries by cooperating with each other to cut the middlemen: Safeway, Hinky Dinky, etc. FIRST MEETING: Monday, September 20, 1971 WHERE: Lincoln Free School, 700 North 27
