Women sponsor anti-war boycott

Peace activities for Tuesday have been announced by community and campus women and veterans against the Vietnam war.

"The day will be a time to talk and to dramatize the war's cost in inflation and consumer buying," Maggie Malloy said of an all-day boycott sponsored nationally by the Women Uniting and Ending the War Organization.

The Nebraskans for Peace spokeswoman said here in Lincoln her organization and the Welfare Mothers, City-wide Tenants Organization, University Women's Action Group, Mothers for Peace, and Democratic Women are organizing the local boycott. Downtown businesses will be picketed and a film, "Don't Buy the War, Mrs. Smith," will be shown at 8 p.m. Tuesday night at the Venture House, 2702 No. 49th St.

Malloy said there is practically "no way" they can measure the boycott's success, but she said they plan to do it again, possibly asking local business to close for a day.

Also Tuesday night, State Coordinator Larry Wright, Lincoln, has called an organizational meeting of the Nebraska Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

Wright, calling his organization "strictly nonviolent," explained that the group is the same one that began the peace activities in Washington D. C. last April.

Although Wright said, "everything is still in the making," he expressed interest in holding a winter "soldier investigation" in Lincoln.

During the investigation, Wright explained, "people who have experienced atrocities in Vietnam come forth and state what they experienced."

"And if we get enough members to be heard, we hope to be active in future Presidential elections," he added.
