Tagge claims accuracy mark

Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge, who moved to fourth on the all-time Big Eight passing yardage list, is enroute to becoming the most accurate passer in Big Eight Conference history.

Tagge's 14-21 performance against Minnesota was good for 218 passing yards and pushed his three-year total to 3,207. The Cornhusker senior will undoubtedly move into second for passing yardage, but his chances of catching Kansas State's Lynn Dickey (6,208) are out of reach.

Well within Tagge's reach, however, are a pair of Big Eight Conference passing efficiency records. Most likely to fall is the standard for career completion percentage. Tagge, with 22 of 31 this season, now sports a 59.7 per cent accuracy for his varsity years.

The accuracy record of 54.5

and is held by Oklahoma's Bob Warmack.

With three touchdown passes last Saturday, Tagge put his career mark at 18 which is 11 short of the record held by Dickey.

departments in the arts has hurt the University support that is given to those departments."

A meeting will be held in the Nebraska Union at 7 p.m. today to discuss the formation of such a Council. Potter said "some of the ideas are kind of vague right now and the idea of having the meeting is to talk over those ideas."

"If a council seems reasonable after the discussion the meeting will end with the selection of a temporary steering committee," he said.

Devaney not laughing at Aggie jokes yet

by Jim Johnston

Texas A & M's 37-0 loss to Louisiana State last week is misleading. The time and situation was all in LSU's favor.

The Tigers, who were upset by Colorado the week before, were back out to prove themselves and were also trying to gain revenge from a last-second loss the Aggies handed them in 1970.

THE SCOREBOARD showed the Tigers winning 37-0, but the final score doesn't tell the story. The Aggies had three passes intercepted—two of which set up LSU touchdowns—and Tiger head coach Charlie McClendon played his first unit most of the game.

The final score makes LSU look all the better and dampens the opinion about Texas A & M. But Nebraska head coach Bob Devaney isn't one of those people who is laughing about the Aggies.

"Texas A & M is the type of team that can bounce back any week and play good football," said Devaney. "You can't count on them playing a bad game one week just because they didn't play well the week before."

DEVANEY doesn't worry about the Huskers being over-confident.

"We have no problems at all with our players looking ahead to anything but playing Texas A & M," said Devaney. "We have to look at every team as trying to take us out of the No. 1 position."

For the third straight week, the Huskers will be facing a highly respected quarterback. But, for the third straight week, the quarterback presents a different problem.

TEXAS A & M quarterback Lex James is a roll-out quarterback who is faster than either Oregon's Dan Fouts or Minnesota's Craig Curry.

"Our defensive ends and cornerbacks will have to be ready for either the run or pass," said Devaney. "Their quarterback rolls out quickly and if he can't get around the end he's always got that man downfield to throw to. And he's a good passer."

Devaney said the Aggies prefer to throw the action-type pass.

"James is tough to contain," continued Devaney. "He rolls out there fast and we just have to be ready for him."

THE OTHER problem the Huskers are facing this week is the cold and flu bug. Fullback Maury Damkroger has been sidelined two days with the flu and slotback Johnny Rodgers, who scored three touchdowns against Minnesota, left Tuesday's practice early and worked out in sweat clothes Wednesday because of a cold.

Center Doug Dumler and linebacker Bill Sloey, both injured in the Oregon game, should be back this week after sitting out the game against Minnesota. Dumler sustained a foot injury and Sloey was sidelined with a knee injury.

The Cornhuskers, although losing ground, still claimed the No. 1 position in the Associated Press and United Press International polls. Notre Dame remains second.

to Nebraska, the demands and needs of the nation, the number of students involved, existing weaknesses and strengths of the programs, and costs.

These phase-outs will not affect masters level programs in the affected departments.

By cutting down on the number of doctoral programs, the University hopes to beef up the quality of the programs that are still offered. Cromwell mentioned the inter-campus graduate program in social work being developed now as an example of positive effects of coordinating the campuses.

"We also are working on similar inter-campus programs in psychology, community and regional planning, and various areas of the life sciences," he said. "For example, if we get the pharmaceutical sciences and medical sciences working together it will result in more strength in both programs."
