viable citizens in kindergarten cages is absurd," said one.

Seven per cent of the respondents said they agree with the present policy. Nine per cent said the majority of students on their floor agrees with the present policy.

Most respondents who agree with the present policy said the privacy it affords is desirable. "Many girls prefer the security and privacy of the dorms as they are now," said one SA.

The Council on Student Life is planning to meet with the Board of Regents in November to discuss the co-ed visitation question.

The Residence Halls Association is considering a law suit against the Board in an attempt to liberalize the policy, according to Roger Story, the organization's president.

Gallup poll: visitation favored

The trend toward co-ed living on campus received unprecedented acceptance in a recent national Gallup poll.

When asked if they would mind if their daughter lived in a co-ed dormitory at college—in the same building but in a separate room from the men—50 per cent of the responding adults (aged 18 and over) said they would, and 46 per cent said they would not mind. The rest were undecided.

Of those with a college background, 57 per cent said they would not mind.

Forty-eight per cent of the men responding said they would not mind, and 43 per cent of the women said they would not.

Sixty per cent of those under 30 said they would not mind, 36 per cent of those over 50 said they would not, and 45 per cent of those between 30 and 49 said they would not mind.
