

OSU's late scoring insults Black Shirts

by Jim Johnston
Stillwater, Okla.—This is a story about 13 points. . . the 13 points Oklahoma State scored in the final two minutes in losing a 41-13 decision to the Nebraska Cornhuskers Saturday.

Some Nebraska players were afraid those 13 points meant there would still be practice Sunday morning. (Coach Bob Devaney had promised the players there wouldn't be a workout Sunday morning if they played a good game against Oklahoma State.)

THE BLACK SHIRTS were insulted by those 13 points, even though they were watching the action from the sidelines as the second team defense yielded the first points scored against Nebraska in Big Eight competition this year.

But nobody in the Nebraska dressing room—excluding sports writers—talked about those 13 points as hurting Nebraska's No. 1 national rating. The Nebraska Cornhuskers refuse to play the No. 1 game.

team defense in the game. He knows a third straight shutout would have helped Nebraska's No. 1 rating.

But he also knows that team morale is important. Devaney prefers to give everybody a chance to play rather than get involved with politics about national ratings.

"This is the first time our alternate units, both offense and defense, didn't play well," said Devaney. "but I think we learned something out there. Our alternate units are important and we hope they show improvement."

Devaney, however, was satisfied with the overall performance.

"I THINK WE played a good game," said Devaney. "but we played against a team that came to play football. Oklahoma State played us tough."

The Cornhuskers now turn their attention to Colorado. And the Nebraska players didn't need reminding about that nationally televised date with the Buffaloes at Lincoln

SPORTS

Oklahoma's 75-28 rout over Kansas State could push the Sooners into the No. 1 position this week, but the Nebraska players and coaches don't really care.

"I DON'T SEE what's such a big deal if we're No. 2 and Oklahoma is No. 1," said Nebraska flanker Johnny Rodgers. "We get a chance to play them and I know when we leave Oklahoma we're going to be No. 1."

Quarterback Jerry Tagge, when asked about the national ratings, voiced the same opinion.

"We don't care about national ratings," said Tagge. "We don't care if we drop to No. 2. It's nice to be rated No. 1, but it doesn't help you beat anybody."

Devaney, although disappointed in the play of his reserves, was still satisfied with the performance against Oklahoma State. He stuck to his promise and called off Sunday morning's workout.

DEVANEY DIDN'T discuss national ratings.

He knows Nebraska could have held Oklahoma State scoreless by leaving the first Saturday.

"That was one of the first things the guys mentioned after the game," said Husker co-captain Jim Anderson. "We've been thinking about Colorado. It's on TV and we want a chance to show everybody how good we are."

IF THERE WAS ever a time for a let down or that looking ahead feeling, it was at Oklahoma State Saturday. But the Cornhuskers survived a letdown.

There's no worry about a letdown for the Colorado game.

R&I football ends regular season

Phi Gamma Delta, Abel VIII and the Hawks end regular season play in intramural flag football as the top-rated teams in their divisions.

Based on the completion of the regular season and excluding competition in the playoffs which began last week, only two new teams crack the ratings.

Delta Tau Delta, an early-season member of the fraternity top five, regains a spot after a 34-18 win over Sigma Nu. They replace Delta Sigma Pi, who suffered their first loss of the season last week, a 32-12 setback to Alpha Gamma Rho.

Fagowies take over the number five spot in the independent division after completing an undefeated season with a 29-14 win over French Quarters.

Only 12 of the 124 intramural teams, including B teams, went through regular season play undefeated. Fourth-ranked Acacia was the only fraternity A team to avoid a loss.

The flag football season ends Saturday with the 10 a.m. all-university title game.

UNIVERSITY students now registering for second semester classes need not worry about getting their schedules back early, Smith added. "The entire program takes only a few hours to run, once we've got it set up," he said. "We ought to be able to squeeze it in somewhere."

"The changeover is well worth any inconvenience," Smith said. "The system will be a lot more efficient in the long run."
