

Heisman Trophy . . .

--The early voting deadline (Nov. 24 this year) which rules out many late-season and all bowl game performances as factors in the balloting.

SOME CRITICS, downgrade the Heisman because some of its recipients have been busts in professional football. They point particularly to Navy's Joe Bellino (1960), Oregon State's Terry Baker (1962), Notre Dame's John Juarte (1964) and Beban.

On the other hand, a number of Heisman winners have gone on to excel as pros: for example, Wisconsin's Alan Ameche (1954), Notre Dame's Paul Hornung (1956), LSU's Bill Cannon (1959) and Southern Cal's Mike Garrett (1965). And in any case, the Heisman is supposed to be an award for collegiate, not professional performance.

Still, the Heisman can be a psychological burden for a pro. Roger Staubach, Navy's 1963 winner now playing professionally for the Dallas Cowboys, has turned his trophy over to his young daughters who use it as a hobby horse.

"If I make it as a pro," Staubach explains, "I'll put it on display in the living room. Until then, my daughters can have it."

This is the last issue of The Daily Nebraskan before Thanksgiving vacation. Next issue will be Wednesday, Dec. 1.
