Center sets 'Pill' policy

Contraceptives at the UNL Student Health Center will now be prescribed only to "married students and those planning to be married," the center's medical director said Wednesday.

Calling the statement a "clarification of policy," Dr. Samuel I. Fuenning said it represented little change in procedure.

Within the last two weeks the medical staff decided to approve this policy recommended by a special study committee, according to Fuenning.

The committee, which consisted mainly of Lincoln physicians who work part-time at the center, was established last fall.

It studies the question of whether the center was open to civil and criminal liability for prescribing contraceptives to minors without parental consent.

The question is touchy, Fuenning said. Many people, especially those in outstate Nebraska, feel that treating minors is "promoting promiscuity," he added.

Some students may have misunderstood the center's policy, he said, but "we have never prescribed medication on demand." Fuenning said the decision will be used as a guideline for each individual physician. "The doctor still has the responsibility," he said.
