Hansen stresses NU unity

Competition, rather than rivalry, between UNO and UNL is healthy, Omaha Regent Kermit Hansen said Wednesday night.

"It is important for a Regent to think of the University as a system rather than three separate campuses," Hansen told a meeting of Sigma Delta Chi professional journalistic society.

The campuses should operate as a unified system, he said. "I think there's got to be uniformity, but I don't read uniformity as unanimity," he said.

The UNL and UNO campuses are entirely different, Hansen said. UNO is an urban university, and is commuter rather than residential oriented, with a different student mix.

"It must serve a population element, the non-white, to a greater degree than the other campuses might," he said. "UNO has the potential of becoming a good if not great urban university, but this would mean putting emphasis on areas not available to the Lincoln campus.

Lincoln Regent Ed Schwartzkopf, scheduled to discuss the relationship between the campuses, was unable to attend the meeting.

Hansen favors a broad approach in University planning. It makes sense, he said, to make one discipline first class on one campus and dilute it on another.

"You reinforce your strengths by not trying to do everything the same."

UNO is strong in the areas of urban affairs, history and education, Hansen said.

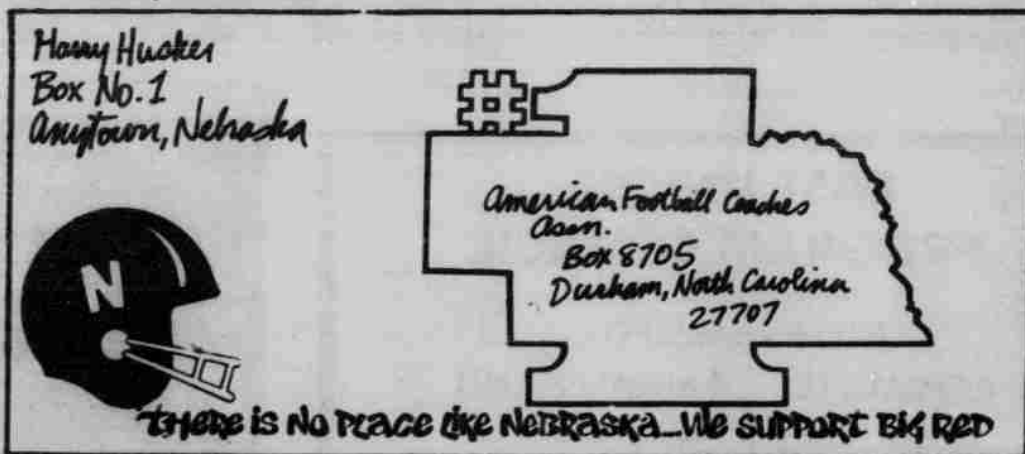

The Omaha banker expressed dissatisfaction with the Regents' present relationship with their Student Advisory Board. Contact with the students is too infrequent, he said, and suggested establishing monthly meetings.

A viable, honest relationship with the Advisory Board would be better than having a student Regent, he said.

"I see more problems than clear value in having a student as a Regent," Hansen said. Questions of eligibility, length of term and representation would be difficult to decide, he said.
