

Funeral services set for former Husker gridder

MILWAUKEE—Former Nebraska football player Rex Lowe died Wednesday after a prolonged battle against Hodgkin's disease.

Although the illness prevented him from reaching his full potential as a pass receiver, Lowe overcame the disease to play in the 1969 Sun Bowl.

Lowe twice was honored by his teammates with game balls—once after the 1971 Kansas game, and again following Nebraska's 1972 Orange Bowl victory over Alabama.

Services for Lowe will be in Milwaukee Saturday. Former teammates Bill Ziemberger and Dan Schneiss will be among pallbearers. Team captain Jerry Tagge and Freshman Coach Jim Ross will represent Husker players and coaches at the funeral.

Lowe is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lowe, and a brother, Joel.

Veterans seek information for G. I. Bill testimony

As a follow-up to the petition drive to get increased educational benefits, the Student Veterans Organization (SVO) is asking veterans to fill out a questionnaire form which will be used to compile facts and figures to show the need for changes in the current G.I. Bill.

"I'm sure that most veterans will agree that the G.I. Bill is not sufficient to cover the cost of getting an education, so it is to their benefit to fill out the questionnaire, said Ken Brauer, president of SVO.

The petitions that were signed recently will be used by the National Association of Collegiate Veterans, Incorporated, when they testify before the Senate Committee on Veteran Affairs this month. The information from the questionnaires will be used to help support proposed changes in the GI Bill.

SVO has a booth at the north entrance of the Nebraska Union through Friday of this week.

Yale plan defers tuition

Many universities throughout the United States are now using a deferred tuition plan.

This plan enable students to finance their college education with their future lifetime earnings, by signing long-term loan agreements.

Deferring tuition payment is not as appropriate for UNL as for many other schools, Howard R. Neville, executive vice president for administration, said Monday.

Although the plan has been discussed at several meetings, Neville said the University would probably "exhaust every other alternative before resorting to it."

The tuition at Yale and many other private and eastern schools is $3,000 a year, not including books, room and board, according to Neville. This means a freshman is facing a $10-15,000 cost, he explained.

"It is an interesting plan," but does not seem best for UNL since the tuition cost is so much less, he said.

Yale students agree to pay Yale 0.4 percent of their annual post-graduate income for every $1,000 borrowed.

This plan provides an opportunity for someone to go to a high-priced school, Neville said. The high cost may be worth it for some people, he said.

allowed to vote in about 1920."

Women can become deacons in the Episcopal church Rev. Ronald Wiley said, but there are no women priests yet.

Rabbi Morton Waldman said the first woman will be ordained in Judaism in the Reform Movement this year.

"The Orthodox and Conservative Movements at this time would not accept such a thing," the rabbi said.

Members of a group of pre-seminary students who visited many protestant seminaries over interim break said they saw quite a number of women students. Mary Newcomer said most seminaries had between four and 15 women students.

Methodist Minister Mel Luetchens said the problem is at the local level. "People are not ready to hire women for positions of responsibility," he said.
