

Chambers advises political action

"Go to the Legislature and make the elected officials accountable to you," Nebraska Sen. Ernie Chambers told a small group of students Saturday at the Nebraska Union.

Speaking at the Organizing Conference for Young Voters Chambers said it was a problem to make students understand the serious problems facing the nation.

"There is a lot of criticism of the system and the older people who messed it up," he said, "but most students follow the path of least resistance after graduation."

The American education system teaches the "herd instinct" and produces people who are afraid to think, according to the senator from Omaha.

"What we have to learn how to do is not emphasize the negative," he said. "Develop confidence in your own mind. The idea is to communicate, to find the words to give feet to your thoughts."

Chambers advised students not to emphasize the exterior.

"Long hair doesn't mean you're a revolutionary," he said. "As long as they (politicians) can get you arguing about things like this you can't do anything."

The number of young voters won't make a ripple if they don't learn how to think, Chambers said.

For example, history must be looked at all over again, he commented.

"In school they don't tell you that John Adams was a revolutionary," he said. "When history looks back at its scoundrels... they have to start cleaning these guys up."

History has not been full of reasonable men talking out their problems rationally, Chambers said.

It has been the one with the "strongest, hardest fist who could impose his ways on others," he added.

Allen Beermann, Secretary of State told students at the conference that the deadline for registering to vote in the May 9 primary election is April 28 at 6 p.m.

"Voting is a privilege and I don't want any of you to miss it," he said.

Beermann said many students ask whether they should register in Lincoln or in their home towns.

"The federal Constitution says you have a choice," he said. "But before you make a decision analyze the situation."

Car insurance premiums and taxes may go up if the students register to vote in Lancaster County, he said.

Moving from a dorm to an apartment off-campus would require re-registration, Beermann commented.

"Nebraska has a liberal registration procedure," Beermann said. "It has one of the lowest residency requirements."

Currently a person must have lived in his precinct five days, his county 20 days and the state six months in order to vote, he said. But there is a bill in the Legislature to eliminate the six months and establish a new, shorter period, Beermann added.

"In Nebraska you have to be registered as a Democrat or a Republican to vote in the primary election," Beermann said. "If you register independent, you vote only the non-political route."

Beermann said he was in favor of lowering the voting age to 18 and is now in favor of lowering the legal age to age 18.

"I believe that the legal age should be the same as the age of suffrage," he said.
