

Getting busted

Booked . . . an arrest record and a three-minute phone call.

Searched . . . wallet, belt and pocket change are taken from the prisoner

Fingerprinted . . . sent to the State Patrol and the FBI.

Henninger . . . "When the door closes, the jail climate starts."

Daily Nebraskan writer Bob Latta last week went through the process of being booked into the city jail for a fictitious crime. In an article on page 2 he gives his impression of the jail from his brief encounter with that environment.

Photos by Gail Folda

Jail . . . "a theater—a setting where certain roles are played out."