Orientation

presently involved with student government," ASUN Sen. Atti Kaminski said. Kaminski said she believes the selection process was prejudiced toward students who "don't rock the boat."

The program is looking for the student who can put aside himself and his personal interests when representing the University, Wirtz said.

"I don't see the purpose of summer orientation to educate the people of the state or incoming students about pet projects or programs but rather to provide broad and general information about the great variety of University life styles, programs and resources," he said.

An integrated studies major in the College of Arts and Sciences, Kaminski said she was not recommended for a final interview for the host positions.

She said she believes that since the summer orientation program is funded by student fees, it should be more representative of the student body.

"The selections are definitely prejudiced toward a small sector of the university," she said.

She said her qualifications for the student host position include two years work in the office of student affairs, ASUN senator 1971-72, member of ASUN Executive Committee 1971-72, member of the PACE minority scholarship campaign and coordinator of the 1971 Time-Out Conference.

Kaminski said she has been involved with the freshman seminar program and helped establish the University Women's Action Group and the Women's Resource Center. She said she also helped develop the UNL Women Studies Program.

Wirtz said that each application was "examined carefully." "ASUN members are not the most important people in their colleges," he added.

Dean of Student Affairs Ely Meyerson said he would investigate the alleged inequities of the summer orientation selection process. Meyerson suggested that students recommend means to improve the selection process if the summer orientation program is not representative.
